'Soldier's kidnap due to negligence'

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT
Jerusalem Post Reporter

BEIRUT. — The terrorists kidnaped an Israeli soldier on Wednesday evening because the Israeli Defence Forces let them move freely near its positions on the assumption that they were preparing to leave the city, the kidnapped soldier's commander said here yesterday.

He was referring to the fact the PLO men previously kept their distance from IDF troops and ran across open areas to avoid being hit by sniper fire. But this time they sneaked very close to an observation post west of Burj Barajneh and surprised the soldier, who left his gun in the position and went off with them.

An infantryman in another position saw the kidnapping but held his fire for fear of hitting his comrade.

Soon after the incident at 6 p.m.

Israeli loudspeakers blared towards Burj al-Barajneh, ordering the terrorists to return the man. But there was no response, the brigade commander said.

The incident, which the IDF spokesman termed "a serious breach of the cease-fire," was not the only violation. Early yesterday morning, terrorists fired at IDF troops at el-Ouzal near the airport, and at 7 p.m., mortar and light-arms fire were directed at an IDF position near the Hippodrome.

In the eastern sector, the enemy directed light-arms and bazooka fire towards Amik and Yenta. Israeli troops returned the fire in the eastern sector, but not in Beirut.

Israel suffered no casualties in any of the exchanges, the IDF spokesman reported. An officer in the port area said that there had been a 30-minute exchange of fire west of the crossing point. An officer high up in an observation post said the fire had been traded between Phal angist troops and the PLO. "It starts with a shot here and a shot there and a short while later you hear automatic fire," an officer said. In spite of yesterday's and Wednesday's incidents, and notwithstanding Defence Minister Ariel Sharon's urging to maintain high alert, a certain laxity was apparent among front-line troops.

The mood was obviously due to the scheduled PLO withdrawal — although no practical steps were evident — except for a meeting between Israeli officers headed by O/C Northern Command Aluf Amir Drori and the aide to the Lebanese chief of operations, General Abbas Hamdan. They reportedly agreed that Lebanese soldiers will take

U.S. gratified by decision on Habib plan

By WOLF BLITZER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — The U.S. yesterday warmly welcomed Israel's decision to go ahead with special U.S. envoy Philip Habib's plan to remove the PLO peacefully from West Beirut.

"We are, of course, extremely gratified by the Israeli cabinet's approval of the plan, which is a tribute to the remarkable diplomatic achievement of the president's personal emissary, ambassador Philip Habib," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said. "It sets the stage for implementation of the plan, which we expect to start as early as this weekend."

Speakes added: "We urge the parties to make every effort to clear up the remaining matters so that implementation can go forward as soon as possible."

U.S. officials said the PLO was expected to hand over the two captured Israeli soldiers some time today, thereby setting the stage for the start of the withdrawal tomorrow. After the Israeli soldiers have been released, U.S. officials said, President Ronald Reagan is expected to make a televised statement formally announcing that the U.S. has accepted Lebanon's request for American participation in supervising the PLO evacuation.

Lebanon's official request for the involvement of the U.S. troops reached Washington yesterday morning.

U.S. officials said Secretary of State George Shultz was expected to hold his first formal news conference later today to answer a whole series of questions on the Lebanese situation as well as on the broader Arab-Israeli peace process.

State department spokesman Alan Romberg denied a news report that yesterday quoted Habib as conceding in a telephone conversation with Prime Minister Menachem Begin that Israel's bombardment of West Beirut had played a decisive role in convincing the PLO to leave the city.

Romberg told reporters that he had seen "nothing" that could confirm that report. Indeed, he continued, "I can't believe it's true." Habib's earlier reports to Washington about the Israeli bombing and shelling of PLO positions had run contrary to that report, he added.

Shultz, meanwhile, yesterday continued his consultative process on the Middle East by inviting former under secretary of state Joseph Sisco to the State Department for a private exchange on how the U.S. should move ahead in the peace process.

"I gave him my ideas," Sisco later said, denying that Shultz had offered him a specific diplomatic assignment in the negotiations.

Shultz has spent much of this week seeking the views of influential Americans on the Middle East.

Sharon warns Syria to keep cease-fire

By SARAH HONIG
Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Israel has warned Syria not to exploit the situation before and during the evacuation of the terrorists from Beirut to commit cease-fire violations. It is thought that the Syrians may be contemplating such breaches, feeling that the evacuation operation grants them temporary immunity. Defence Minister Ariel Sharon told members of the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defence Committee yesterday.

The meeting was the third in a series begun a week ago. Unlike earlier meetings, yesterday's was described as calm and business-like, chiefly because the evacuation of Beirut is in the offing.

Sharon said that Israel holds Syria responsible for all incursions carried out from areas it controls, even if the perpetrators are PLO terrorists. The U.S. has been made aware of the extent of recent violations and Israeli soldiers have been instructed to step up their vigilance during the two weeks of the evacuation.

Sharon confirmed that in the past few days terrorists in West Beirut have been acquiring Lebanese papers and blending in with the civilian population, to avoid leaving. "But we have no doubts the majority will leave. No offices, headquarters or contact points of any sort will remain," he said.

When Yitzhak Rabin noted that the PLO is proclaiming its removal from Beirut a victory, Sharon said the Foreign Ministry is drawing up plans to battle PLO propaganda on this count.

The Alignment members in the committee later expressed approval of the evacuation agreement, although Mapam continued to call for a commission of inquiry into the conduct of the war. This was staunchly opposed by Rabin.

In view of internal differences, the Alignment is to spend the coming days in an attempt to agree on common policy line by the end of next week.

Beirut's attention now focused on elections

BEIRUT (Reuters). — As final preparations for the PLO evacuation gathered pace, Lebanese politicians turned their attention to a fresh crisis over the election of a new president.

The 92-member parliament had been scheduled to vote yesterday. But on Wednesday night, the election was postponed until Monday after Moslem and leftist leaders voiced strong opposition to the only candidate to declare himself so far, Bashir Jemayel, 34-year-old commander of the country's powerful Christian Phalange.

Former prime minister Saeb Salam, a key figure in negotiations to resolve the issue, had a series of meetings with other ex-prime ministers and leftist leaders.

Cabinet okays Habib schedule for PLO exit

By ASHER WALLFISH
Post Diplomatic Correspondent

The PLO is to begin leaving Beirut tomorrow afternoon, ending nearly 11 weeks of Israel's campaign to drive the terrorists from Lebanon.

Yesterday's cabinet acceptance of an amended plan presented by U.S. mediator Philip Habib signalled the go-ahead for the PLO and Syrian forces to begin a 14-15 day withdrawal from West Beirut.

However, the implementation of the withdrawal remains conditional on the PLO's returning safely today an Israeli Air Force pilot captured on the first day of the war and an Israeli soldier kidnapped on Wednesday.

The approval here in Jerusalem gave the green light to a French paratrooper unit to fly yesterday from Corsica to Cyprus, and then to reach Beirut Port around noon tomorrow.

The French are providing the first contingent of the multinational force to take up positions, at the points of exit by sea and land, for the 15,000 and more PLO departers from West Beirut.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Defence Minister Ariel Sharon and Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir sat over the Hebrew translation of the Habib plan yesterday morning before the cabinet session and agreed on a small number of additional improvements in the text. The latter were promptly communicated to Habib in Beirut.

Habib's consent to these changes came back to Jerusalem while the cabinet was still sitting, and thus enabled the ministers to put their final seal on his plan.

When considering the plan, the cabinet also had before it a detailed, day-by-day timetable for the PLO withdrawal and for the deployment of the multinational force.

The timetable counts tomorrow as the starting day for the pullout and sets a maximum period of 14-15 days for its completion.

One obstacle to cabinet approval of the Habib plan, which was removed yesterday, was confirmation from Paris that if the evacuation was halted for any reason, the French contingent would leave Lebanon forthwith. This French commitment is more specific than a general commitment in the Habib text, which Israel considered sufficient for Italy and the U.S. but not hard enough to remove distrust here of French sympathy for the PLO.

A second obstacle removed was a reference in the Habib text to UN observers and to Security Council Resolution 516, which calls for the dispatch of ceasefire observers to Beirut. Israel does not accept that resolution, which it regards as hostile, and hence insisted that the phrase concerning the resolution and the observers be deleted.

Israel informed the U.S. administration privately that the 10 UN observers who have been in Beirut throughout the hostilities, and before, can stay and file their reports, provided that no additional observers are sent in.

Before approving the plan, the cabinet received assurances about the return of the two Israeli prisoners and was told that efforts

Kidnapped soldier 'unknown' to PLO

BEIRUT (AP). — Final arrangements for tomorrow's start of the evacuation of the PLO from Beirut were under way yesterday.

However, both the PLO and Lebanese officials said they knew nothing of a kidnapped Israeli soldier whose release Israel has demanded as a condition for allowing the operation to begin.

The U.S. and France and Italy were formally asked to provide the force to oversee the evacuation and the first units will arrive before the first PLO men leave tomorrow afternoon from Beirut port.

A PLO-held Israeli pilot and the remains of nine Israeli soldiers will be delivered to Israel before the 15-day evacuation operation begins, Lebanon's Foreign Minister Fud Butros said in a televised statement.

Butros made no reference to an Israeli soldier kidnapped by PLO terrorists from his lookout post

Wednesday evening and taken at gunpoint to the Burj al-Barajneh refugee camp or Beirut's southern edge.

PLO spokesman Mahmoud Labadi and Jamil Fatah said they knew nothing about a kidnapped Israeli soldier. But they affirmed that captured pilot Aharon Ahiaz and the bodies of nine soldiers would be delivered to Lebanon Prime Minister Shaulk Wazzan or his representative "at the beginning of the withdrawal — on D-Day," Hilal said.

Lebanon's elder statesman, Saeb Salam, who is close to the U.S.-sponsored evacuation talks, also told reporters he knew nothing about a kidnapped Israeli soldier.

The Voice of Lebanon radio station, which is sympathetic to Israel, said Israeli forces on the outskirts of Burj al-Barajneh called through bullhorns for a speedy release of the kidnapped soldier "or face grave consequences."

Reuters quoted Israeli Foreign Ministry officials in East Beirut as saying they believed agreement had been reached on the return of the kidnapped Israeli soldier. They said he would probably be handed over at the same time as Ahiaz.

An advance French unit of 350 paratroopers is due in Beirut tomorrow morning and the terrorists will begin leaving West Beirut in the afternoon, Butros said.

The evacuation operation is to last two weeks and the Lebanese government has asked that the multi-national force function in West Beirut for a month, Butros said. "We have, of course, reserved the right of the Lebanese government to terminate the mandate of the peace force before the expiry of the one-month period or seek an ex-

Bombing in Paris as French terrorist campaign goes on

PARIS (UPI). — Racist attacks against both France's Jews and Arabs mounted yesterday in spite of President Francois Mitterrand's crash programme to stamp out terrorism.

The anarchist and Maoist Direct Action group claimed responsibility for the 3.30 a.m. bombing of the right-wing weekly Minute, calling it "a fascist and racist sheet" for supporting Israel's war against the Palestinian terrorists in Lebanon.

Minute's editor, Jean-Claude Godeau, said the bombing of his paper was a clear retaliation for its support "for the Israeli army in Beirut that is trying to destroy this terrorist nest. The Palestine Liberation Organization has been fuelling terrorism throughout Europe."

The bombing came less than a day after Mitterrand's cabinet, worried by a rise in terrorist violence involving chiefly Arabs and Jews or their sympathizers, outlawed Direct Action.

The explosion badly damaged the weekly's offices and several cars outside, but no one was hurt.

The Arab population of Lyon, second largest city in France, was aroused on Wednesday by reports that a murdered Algerian youth was found with a swastika carved on his back. Police later denied that any Nazi insignia had been inscribed on the strangled victim.

In Nice, police reinforced security around the city's synagogue following a false bomb alert by an anonymous telephone caller, police officials said.

UN condemns Israel, upholds Palestinian rights

UNITED NATIONS. — An emergency session of the UN General Assembly voted 120-2 yesterday to condemn Israel and endorse the Palestinians' right to national independence.

The U.S. prevented Israel's complete isolation in the chamber by joining it in opposing the Arab omnibus resolution.

The diplomatic success of the PLO was dimmed by the abstention of 20 delegations, including nine of the 10 members of the European Economic Community. Greece was the only EEC member to support the resolution.

U.S. ambassador Charles Lichtenstein, explaining the American decision in a brief speech at the end of the debate, said it opposed the resolutions "in order not to place further obstacles in the way of peace" in the Middle East.

Israeli ambassador Yehuda Blum denounced the emergency session as an Arab attempt "to abundantly stoke the furnace of hatred."

The assembly then adopted two accompanying Arab-backed resolutions.

By a 123-2 vote with 18 abstentions, it was decided to convene a UN-sponsored international conference on the "question of Palestine" in Paris August 15-26, 1983 — a year sooner than previously decided.

By a vote of 102-2 with 34 abstentions, June 4 of each year was set as the International Day of Innocent Children Victims of Aggression.

Since the cabinet had time on its hands while waiting for Habib's reply to the suggested Israeli changes, the ministers apparently drifted into a euphoric mood as they reflected on Israel's relations with the U.S. and related international issues.

The Jerusalem Post has it on good authority that the following points were made during the free-wheeling discussion, although it was unable to verify which minister had made what statement. The points were:

Sharon: Let our actions in Lebanon set an example

By ASHER WALLFISH
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Defence Minister Ariel Sharon said yesterday that Israel's firmness in the siege of West Beirut had led to a strengthening of its relations with the U.S. and not weakened them. At no time had those relations been threatened, he said.

Sharon told the cabinet that after Prime Minister Menachem Begin and he had tried, in vain, to convince the U.S. administration in successive contacts over an entire year on the best way to handle the terrorist problem and block further Syrian encroachment in Lebanon, Israel had carried out Operation Peace for Galilee. Now, the U.S. had come round to Israel's point of view.

Despite existing differences of opinion on ways, he said, Israel and the U.S. have three common objectives and two common positions. The common objectives cover:

- expulsion of the terrorists from Beirut;
- departure of all foreign forces from Lebanon;
- security arrangements in southern Lebanon to protect the Israeli border.

Sharon said the common positions referred to the need for stable government in Lebanon and the removal of Soviet influence from Lebanon.

(Sharon's remarks were a response to reflections by Interior Minister Yosef Burg on an erosion in Israel-American relations as a result of Operation Peace for Galilee.)

Sharon said that for the first time in 17 years, the PLO was no longer a factor in Lebanon. It had suffered a mortal blow, politically as well as militarily, he said.

"The PLO will never return to Lebanon," he predicted. "They are not evacuating, they are being expelled," he said.

Sharon said: "Israel's military moves and its bombing of West Beirut till the very last moment showed the terrorists they had no choice but to leave. Let our actions be an example to us on how to act in the future."

Begin, in a similar vein, said that one of Israel's biggest achievements had been to remove the PLO's territorial base.

In an apparent reference to the prediction by Science and Technology Minister Yuval Ne'eman that Israel would stay a long time in Lebanon, Begin said he did not want the troops to remain a day more than was necessary.

Sharon said that once the evacuation was successfully completed, many of IDF reservists would be released and the burden of reserve duty would be very much lightened.

Begin said that Israel need not fear any new initiatives on the

Funerals held for two IDF soldiers

Two soldiers killed in the war in Lebanon were buried yesterday. Samal Rishon (Staff Sergeant) Eitan Rotem, 21, was buried at Kibbutz Givat Haim-Ihud. Rotem was a paratrooper and a member of Israel's national water polo team and just before the war participated in the preliminary rounds of the world championship against China. He is survived by his parents, originally from Argentina, and a brother and sister, all members of the kibbutz.

Samal Rishon Yosef Ami, 21, was buried in Ashkelon. His parents came from Yemen in 1949. Ami began his army service in a Nahal unit, but, at his request, was transferred to the paratroopers. He is survived by five brothers and a sister.

Congress told Taiwan to purchase 60 jets

WASHINGTON (Reuters). — U.S. President Ronald Reagan formally notified Congress yesterday of his proposal to sell Taiwan 60 F-5E and F-5F jet fighters in line with his pledge to maintain the island's defenses.

The move followed by two days a joint announcement by Washington and Peking that the U.S. will gradually reduce arms sales to Taiwan while China agrees to seek a peaceful solution of the Taiwan issue.

Congress has 30 days to veto the sale, but no members have announced any intention of trying to do so.

Israel said selling PLO arms to Iran

WASHINGTON (AP). — Israel is selling arms captured from the PLO in Lebanon to Iran, the newsletter Aerospace Daily reports.

The newsletter quoted unnamed U.S. intelligence sources, who it said refused to discuss specific quantities or amounts. But foreign sources contend that a recent Iran-Israel deal involved up to $50 million in arms sales.

"Israel believes Iran's military will come to play a prominent political role and wants to make sure it ends up on the winning side," the newsletter quotes the sources as saying.

Israel lets food, fuel into W. Beirut

BEIRUT (UPI). — Israel yesterday permitted 20,000 litres of fuel and 40 tons of emergency Red Cross food into West Beirut in a major relaxation of the siege of the beleaguered city.

Five trucks marked with the Red Cross insignia passed into the besieged city before noon at the Israeli-controlled port and made their way to the nine distribution points in West Beirut, where the food and fuel were distributed.

Permission for the convoy to enter the sealed Moslem half of the city was obtained Wednesday after two weeks of daily Red Cross attempts to secure an authorization from an Israeli officer at one of the crossing points.

"Now it would be nice if the electricity were turned on," said Red Cross spokesman Jean-Jacques

Kurz. "Permission has been given for nine more trucks to enter West Beirut Friday, also carrying heating fuel and Red Cross emergency rations for displaced Palestinians and Lebanese."

Kurz said Palestinian refugees from the bombed-out camp of Burj al-Barajne would get the contents of one entire truck.

The fuel is for the American University hospital and the food for 250 Lebanese Palestinian families displaced in the fighting.

The rations delivered yesterday can feed 1,250 persons for 15 days. The 40 tons of food were part of a consignment of 150 tons; in 12,000 packages intended to feed 84,000 persons for two weeks, Kurz said.

The rations have been held in Jounieh, 16 kilometres north of Beirut, because the Israelis had declined to give authorization at the crossings.

Each relief package contained 25 kilograms of food stuffs — flour, rice, animal oil, tinned meat, sugar and dried beans.

The popular daily newspaper A-Nahar was back on the streets yesterday after a 15-day shutdown caused by the shelling of its offices on August 4 and lack of fuel to run the printing presses.

Israel's fuel blockade and shelling of West Beirut took a heavy toll of newspapers. On August 5 only the leftist mass circulation A-Safir managed to get out an edition. For most of the past two weeks, only A-Safir and two tiny leftist newspapers were published in West Beirut. But yesterday, almost all were back on the newsstands, including A-Nahar's French-language sister, L'Orient-Le Jour.

Beirut police dismantle massive car bomb

BEIRUT. — Police yesterday thwarted an attempt to blow up the Lebanese Information Ministry in West Beirut by a car bomb, while three cabinet ministers were meeting.

Police defused some 100 kilograms of explosives rigged to the car's doors and under the front and rear seats shortly after it was parked near the doorsteps of the 12-storey ministry building by a Lebanese Christian woman, the ministry said in a statement.

The woman, identified as Nayla Sarraf, was said to have produced forged press papers to have her bomb-laden car parked in front of the ministry. She was arrested, the statement said.

"Information Minister Michael Eddé, Tourism Minister Marwan Hamadeh and Labour and Social Affairs Minister Abdul Rahman Labban, as well as the entire staff of the ministry and the state radio station, have escaped a bloodbath," the statement said.

No other details were given about the woman or her motive, beyond saying that she drove the rigged car from Christian East Beirut to Moslem West Beirut across Israeli lines at Beirut Port.

The vehicle was later set ablaze in the open-air garage of the Central Bank across the street.

A Palestinian bomb disposal expert who dismantled the charge said part of the explosives were "made in Israel." UPI reporters who examined the charge said it had "Hebrew letters on it."

West Beirut is controlled by Lebanon's pro-Israeli militias. Beirut Port is controlled by Israeli troops, who search the few Red Cross and diplomatic cars they let through to the west.

The booby-trapped car was the second found in West Beirut in less than 24 hours.

Another car was found outside the West Beirut offices of the Palestine Research Centre on Wednesday. Palestinian bomb disposal experts blew up the vehicle after evacuating the neighbourhood's residents.

PLO chairman Yasser Arafat has gone into hiding, apparently pressured by security officials fearing Israeli attempts on his life.

Palestinian sources say the change is due to Israel's determination to try to kill PLO leaders and the shift of the siege of Beirut from military confrontation to political negotiation.

A Lebanese official who meets regularly with Arafat said only three Palestinian officials are now privy to the chairman's whereabouts at any given time.

He said the new security precautions around Arafat were imposed on him by his security chiefs, not taken at his own request.

Arafat began to assume a low profile. Palestinian sources say, after Israeli planes flew reconnaissance missions over Beirut for several hours before dropping a single, devastating bomb on an eight-storey building, causing it to collapse on its foundations in a solid pile.

A PLO official close to Arafat said the Palestinians were convinced Israel thought Arafat was in the building. One source said Israeli intelligence was not far wrong.

At the same time, however, Palestinian sources point out that since the start of the month, Arafat has had to spend most of his time closeted in meetings to work out the details of the PLO's departure from Beirut.

Over 80% of Golan Druse now have Israeli IDs

By YOEL DAR
Jerusalem Post Reporter

MAJDAL SHAMS. — More than 80 per cent of the Golan Druse have accepted Israeli identity cards, a senior Interior Ministry official said yesterday.

Among those who accepted these ID cards were religious leaders, dignitaries, teachers, farmers and workers. Some of the Golan Druse asked the Interior Ministry to grant them Israeli citizenship to enable them to obtain passports to travel abroad, particularly to Egypt, or to reach tenured positions as state employees.

Officially, the religious leaders have not cancelled the religious ban imposed on those who have already opted for identity cards, but they have stopped punishing them.

Radical groups this week tried to persuade the local residents to resume the five-month general strike that ended only last month. They charged that the authorities had broken their promise to issue them special identity cards. Officials contend that no one made such a pledge.

The Interior Ministry informed the Israeli Druse mediators, who had helped to end the strike, that all local residents over 16 years of age must accept identity cards, but have the right not to be Israeli citizens.

Although the strike is over, life in the Golan villages has not yet returned to normal. The relations between officials and the Druse leaders are still tense and several hundred workers remain at home because others were hired to replace them.

In some instances, employers are refusing to pay compensation to workers because they deserted their places of work without permission. Some Druse subcontractors are also having difficulties returning to their former jobs in the Hula Valley.

The Labour Ministry has been asked to intervene. But in many instances, the ministry could not compel employers to reinstate those who took part in the general strike.

Begin to deal with missing soldiers

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Relatives of Israel Defence Forces soldiers missing in the central and eastern sectors got a promise from Prime Minister Menachem Begin yesterday that he would "handle their case personally."

The relatives have contended that the Syrian authorities are not telling the truth about the number of IDF soldiers they took prisoner.

The relatives suggested that in contacts with Syria over the location and identification of prisoners before exchanges, Israel should stress that it is aware that the captured tank filmed on parade in Damascus was not the only Israeli vehicle in the parade, and that one of the soldiers shown on the tank was clearly wearing a fringed ritual garment (tzitzit).

Syria asserts that it has only two Israeli prisoners.

CABINET

were already underway in collaboration with the International Committee of the Red Cross to locate the bodies of five Israeli soldiers killed in Operation Peace for Galilee and the graves of four killed in the 1978 Litani Operation.

The cabinet decision as read out to reporters by cabinet secretary Dan Meridor referred to approval of the "arrangement... concerning the departure of the terrorists, their organizations, their leaders, their members, their headquarters and their offices from Beirut and from Lebanon."

U.S. and Israeli sources are careful not to use the term "agreement," since the PLO is not considered to be a party with whom agreements can be concluded. Habib describes his arrangement as "a plan."

One drawback in the arrangement is that the Syrian regulars in West Beirut will not go to Syria. Instead, they will be "joining Syrian Army units in the Bekaa Valley and northern Lebanon."

Shamir explained to reporters later that Syria considers that its units are in Lebanon by the Lebanese government's invitation and following an Arab League decision. When all foreign forces quit Lebanon, Shamir said, the Syrians would go, too, and he hoped they could be induced to go by diplomatic means.

Another change in the Habib text, made over the past two days, at the request of the Lebanese government, has to specify that "non-combatant Palestinians who remain in Lebanon will be subject to Lebanese laws and regulations."

The previous version was that they remain and be permitted to live "in peace and dignity."

The Habib plan assumes contractual force between Israel and the U.S. in that U.S. ambassador Samuel Lewis sent Israel a letter in the name of the U.S. administration asking Israel to approve the plan, and the government sent Lewis a letter back accordingly. The plan is thus an appendix to the exchange of letters between two governments.

An authoritative source in Jerusalem said last night that the form of the Lebanese government's commitment to the PLO was not known here.

Subsidies cut on turkey, frozen meat and chicken

By ZVI TIMOR
Post Economic Reporter

The price of meat increased at midnight. Frozen chicken went up 20 per cent, imported frozen meat seven per cent and turkey seven per cent.

The decision was taken by the Treasury as part of the programme of reducing price subsidies to help finance the war in Lebanon.

This step will save the Treasury IS$350 million by the end of the year. Together with the price increases of August 5, subsidies have been reduced by IS$1.7 billion. The government decided last week that its goal is to cut IS$2.4b. from the subsidies budget.

Following this increase in the price of meat, the subsidy for frozen chicken is still 36 per cent of the wholesale price, down from 66 per cent. The Treasury says that it is necessary to cut the frozen-chicken subsidy to 33 per cent of the wholesale price.

There is no longer any subsidy on imported frozen meat and turkey. There is, however, a 10 per cent protective tariff on imported meat, to protect the local product.

The latest price increases are expected to cause a 0.3 per cent increase in the consumer price index.

It seems that this will be the last price increase before the holidays. The additional IS$700 million subsidy cut is to be postponed until after the holidays.

tands how the Middle East has been changed.

• The U.S. is aware of Israel's service in restraining and driving out Soviet influence.

• The Arab world took note of the way that the Soviet Union stood by idly while Israel dealt Syria punishment.

• Latin American countries have learned that those of them who rely on Soviet support will be disappointed.

• As a result of the Lebanon operation, American influence in Lebanon, and even in Syria, has increased immeasurably.

• U.S. criticism of some Israeli actions is mere lip-service to the hostile television coverage and to American ties with the Arab world. The U.S. cannot ever stand behind Israel 100 per cent. But the U.S. realizes that force is effective and beneficial to its interests as well.

• President Ronald Reagan will be able to use Israel's actions in Lebanon to good electoral advantage.

tension of the mandate if the need arises," he added.

PLO and Lebanese government sources said Yasser Arafat was expected to set up new PLO headquarters at the Arab League in Tunis. Government officials in Tunis said Tunisian President Habib Bouguiba returned to his capital from his summer residence yesterday for Arafat's arrival.

With the PLO evacuation agreement wrapped up, Butros said the Lebanese government plans to begin efforts with the U.S. next week to bring about an Israeli withdrawal from the whole of Lebanon as well as a Syrian and Palestinian withdrawal from eastern and northern Lebanon.

Syria maintains a pre-invasion army of 30,000 men in Lebanon under a 1976 Arab League mandate to police the civil-war armistice between rightist Christian forces and an alliance of mostly Moslem leftists and Palestinians. Several hundred terrorists are operating against the Israel Defence Forces through Syrian lines in the Bekaa and there are other terrorists based in the two camps of Nahr el-Bared and Beddawi near Lebanon's northern port of Tripoli.

Yeshiva youths held for Temple Mt. posters

Three yeshiva students were arrested in Jerusalem yesterday on suspicion of pasting posters on one of the gates to the Temple Mount calling on the Arabs of Israel to leave the country, police said.

The three, from the Beit Hamelvi yeshiva, were caught soon after midnight after a chase through the alleys of the Old City near the Temple Mount.

Police say that the suspects had some of the printed material in their possession. (Iim)

Greek ship to bring wounded PLO to Athens

ATHENS (AP). — A Greek coastal passenger ship has been chartered to bring wounded Palestinian fighters to hospitals in Greece and is expected to sail for Beirut tomorrow a spokesman for the vessel's owners said yesterday.

In response to a request from U.S. presidential envoy Philip Habib, the Greek government has agreed to accept between 200 and 300 wounded Palestinians for treatment in Greek hospitals.

DAVIS. — Dr. Loyal Davis, father of President Ronald Reagan's wife Nancy, died yesterday of congestive heart failure.

High Court considers cases of cohanim wed to divorcees

Two couples of cohanim married to divorcees in "private wedding ceremonies" yesterday turned to the High Court of Justice with allegations of hostility and deliberate foot-dragging encountered while trying to obtain declarative judgments on their marital status from rabbinical courts in Tel Aviv and Beersheba.

The High Court yesterday issued an order nisi calling on the rabbinical courts to show cause within 30 days why they cannot declare that the two couples are prohibited from taking other spouses without first obtaining a divorce. (This declaration would, in effect, confirm that the couples are married by stipulating that the couples must divorce before entering any other marriage.)

In both petitions, presented by attorney Yosef Ben-Menasseh, the husbands contend that the withholding of their rights as citizens by the rabbinical courts does not square with their fulfillment of their duty to their country (by, for example, serving in Operation Peace for Galilee).

In the first petition, submitted by Hanan Cohen and Paulette Amar of Tel Aviv, the court was told that the couple had held a private ceremony in June 1980, in which the groom presented the bride with a ring and uttered the traditional wedding vow ("Be thou consecrated to me by this ring according to the laws of Moses and of the Jewish people") in the presence of two witnesses.

Two days after the ceremony, the couple asked the Tel Aviv rabbinical court for a declarative judgement on their marital status, which would ensure that their offspring would be legally recognized by the state, as their legitimate children, the petition said.

But the rabbinical court held only seven discussions on their case during more than two years, on the average of once every four to six months. The couple reached the conclusion that "the rabbinical court will use any means to stretch out these discussions endlessly and with no decision" and decided to take the case to the High Court.

Cohen and Amar stated that the more they acceded to the ever-burgeoning demands of the three rabbinical judges for more witnesses and more testimony, the more hostile was the rabbis' attitude.

Their petition cites a High Court ruling in a similar case that such discussions must be "short, useful, to the point and dignified," saying that every one of these stipulations has been ignored by the Tel Aviv rabbinical court.

The second petition was brought by Amnon Cohen and Rahel Gur, who held a similar "private wedding ceremony" in March 1982. When they requested a declarative judgement from the Beersheba rabbinical court to insure legal recognition of their potential offspring, the court heard the case and reached a decision after only one discussion — thus fulfilling the "short and dignified" stipulation.

But the rabbinical judges refused to issue any judgement, in order to prevent the couple from using such a statement to obtain legal recognition of their marriage from the Interior Ministry, the High Court was told. (Iim)

South Africa accused of sending fatal letter bomb

MAPUTO, Mozambique (Reuters).

The banned African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa has blamed the South African government for the killing here on Tuesday of Ruth First, one of its leading members.

First, 59, a White South African exile living in Mozambique, died when a parcel bomb exploded in her office at Eduardo Mandlunge University here, where she was director of the Centre of African Studies.

Three persons wounded in the explosion are still in hospital.

The ANC, in a statement released on Wednesday, accused Pretoria of resorting to terrorism in an attempt to destroy the organization, and vowed to avenge the killing of the anti-apartheid campaigner.

First was married to Joe Slovo, a hard-line Marxist regarded as the ANC's leading ideologist.

Aquino de Braganca, a university associate of First's and a close adviser to Mozambique President Samora Machel, had received an envelope identical to that sent to First, a source here said. De Braganca opened it without incident only seconds before the explosion in which he was also wounded, the source added.

U.S. legislators approve $178 billion for defence

WASHINGTON (AP). — The House of Representatives gave final congressional approval Wednesday night to legislation that earmarks nearly $178 billion to equip and operate the U.S. armed forces in the fiscal year starting October 1.

Passage by a 251-148 vote came a day after the Senate endorsed the compromise measure by a 77-21 vote. It now goes to President Ronald Reagan, who has expressed pleasure that Congress authorized nearly every programme he sought.

The measure exceeded the totals of both the original House and Senate versions and is more than $47b. above the comparable bill for the current fiscal year.

The bill provides $800 million for production of the first of an eventual 50 Lockheed C-5B transport planes to strengthen the ability of the air force to carry heavy, bulky items such as tanks and helicopters.

It also earmarks $144.8m. $84.5m. of it in funds reprogrammed from previous authorization bills — to buy three commercial wide-body planes, presumably the Boeing 747 jumbo jet, which had won the Senate's support. It also designates $1m. for continued work on a third candidate, McDonnell Douglas' C-17, which is still in the design stage.

over most of the port area today. They will rope off a zone where the PLO evacuees will queue up for registration and an examination of their belongings to make sure they are carrying only their personal weapons. According to Israel Television, the roped-off area will be small enough to prevent the PLO from staging a parade. No Israeli soldiers will be seen in the port during the evacuations. Later yesterday afternoon, some soldiers were seen jogging along main roads, and others were seen just strolling through the streets. Near the museum crossing point soldiers were sitting on the pavement eating sunflower seeds and advising one another on how to attract the attention of a young woman in blue trousers who was across the street.

But the Lebanese soldiers were nervous after Wednesday night's clash near the parliament building, when a convoy of dark-green Lebanese tanks and armoured personnel carriers had driven past the IDF position to the PLO and leftists' militia front lines. The Lebanese were fired on, turned back and beat a hasty but orderly retreat, an IDF source said.

About a dozen infantrymen and two armoured personnel carriers were left to guard the parliament. The soldiers stood behind the IDF's former eastern embankment carrying loaded M-16 rifles. One soldier sitting behind a lookout man was holding a loaded RPG.

Meanwhile, all work in the parliament building has stopped and armed guards who were at the entrance have been removed. A guard left there casually moved a bed into one of the rooms and turned on a radio on that blared Arabic music.

2 seriously wounded Syrian PoWs freed

BEN-GURION AIRPORT (Itim). — Two seriously wounded Syrian soldiers captured in Lebanon were released by Israel yesterday and flown home. Both had been wounded by bullet wounds in their spines.

Private Shabani Abdul Rahman, 22, from Damascus, paralyzed from the waist down, and Pvt. Akran Mohammed Harfin, 21 from Homs, who was paralyzed from the neck down, were flown by Red Cross cargo plane to Larnaca, Cyprus, before continuing to Syria.

Israel Defence Forces officials said that this was not part of a prisoner exchange but a fulfillment of the Geneva Convention, which calls for the unconditional repatriation of seriously wounded prisoners of war.

The two were treated at the Haim Sheba Medical Centre in Tel Hashomer by Dr. Avraham Uri, who was himself a prisoner in Egypt during the Yom Kippur War. He told reporters that Rahman will be able to function in a wheelchair, but Harfin will not be able to move again.

The Syrians told reporters at the airport that they had been treated well in Israel. Harfin, married and father of a boy, said that he was injured on the first day of the war and that his comrades had fled before he could receive medical treatment. "My buddies left me there and escaped," he said. "Then the Israelis came and took me to the hospital."

After Rahman was wounded, he managed to crawl and hide in the hills, where he was found by Lebanese villagers, who advised him to surrender to the Israelis. "They told me the Israelis would take good care of me," Rahman said, "and that's exactly what they did."

Military court rejects three appeals

TEL AVIV (Itim). — The military court of appeals yesterday turned down requests to lighten the sentences of a soldier convicted of smuggling and a soldier found guilty of looting. It also rejected a prosecution request to increase the sentence of a soldier caught smuggling.

The first soldier, caught at the Rosh Hanikra border crossing point with a radio-tape player, a camera, some cassettes, a small rug, Lebanese and Syrian currency and jewelry, appealed to have his 155,000 fine reduced. (He was also sentenced to a 30-day jail term.) His appeal was turned down.

In the second case, the court rejected the appeal of a soldier convicted of looting in Sidon to reduce his sentence of four months in prison with six more months suspended.

The court also turned down a prosecution request to increase the sentence of a 48-year-old father of four who was convicted of smuggling two pairs of sport shoes, a telephone and a microphone from Lebanon. The reserve soldier served his sentence of eight days in jail in the period between his arrest and his trial, and the prosecution sought to increase his time in jail.

Israel Defence Forces chaplain Rav-Seren (Major) Nadav Yefet sounds a shofar this week as part of the IDF's annual "personal awakening campaign," a tradition of self-examination during the Jewish month of Elul that precedes Rosh Hashana.

Hammer to see Aridor on teachers

TEL AVIV. — The likelihood of a teachers' labour dispute was postponed yesterday after Education and Culture Minister Ze'ev Hammar requested time to meet Finance Minister Yoram Aridor when Aridor returns from abroad next week.

The two ministers will discuss the teachers' demands for implementing the Etzioni Committee recommendations. These call for improvements in teacher training and teachers' working conditions, and recommend a 37 per cent pay hike beyond what the teachers have already received.

The Histadrut Teachers Union is demanding that the work contract being negotiated for the coming school year include a clause allowing the teachers to strike if they are dissatisfied with the progress of negotiations over implementing the Etzioni recommendations.

The Secondary School Teachers Association is willing to forgo the right to strike in return for at least part of the 37 per cent pay rise immediately.

Israeli offenders in Lebanon to be tried here

By ISRAEL AMRANI
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Israeli visitors who commit crimes in Lebanon for which they would be liable to prosecution had they been committed in Israel will be tried in Israeli courts, under emergency regulations signed by Justice Minister Moshe Nissim yesterday.

Until now, Israeli courts could not try such offenders, and technically they could not be held to account, ministry spokesman Yitzhak Feinberg said.

Assistant Attorney-General Yoram Bar-Sela told The Jerusalem Post that the new regulations, which are effective for three months, cover criminal offences only, and do not apply to Lebanese residents.

He said that the regulations were needed because Lebanese courts are virtually at a stand-still. If they were functioning, Sela said, Israeli offenders could be tried by them.

Sela also said that Israeli military courts are not authorized to try civilians on criminal charges. Israeli residents who commit crimes in Judea, Samaria and the Gaza District are subject to criminal prosecution in Israeli courts. The regulations regarding Lebanon are a matter of convenience, not an extension of Israeli law, a legal source told The Post.

Hard times in Poland kill youths' visit here

KIBBUTZ LOHAMEI HAGETA'OT (Itim). — A Polish youth delegation, scheduled to have arrived here soon, has cancelled its Israeli visit because of "the difficult economic situation in Poland."

The cancellation was announced in a letter sent by Religious Affairs Minister Jerzy Kubersky, head of the International Korczak Association, to Binyamin Anulik, secretary-general of the Israel section of the association.

In his letter, Kubersky added that Israeli youth are welcome in Poland at any time.

Two TA officials held on bribe charges

By JEFFREY HELLER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — A high-ranking official of the city's inspection division and a municipal inspector were arrested on Wednesday on suspicion of extorting bribes from Carmel Market vendors, police revealed yesterday.

The two men put the squeeze over a few months on owners of stalls in the open-air market in return for turning a blind eye to infractions of municipal bylaws, a police spokesman said.

The suspects received "unlimited and free" supplies of goods from the vendors, the spokesman said.

The police also believe the merchants were pressured to take relatives and friends of the pair as business partners.

Asked what led detectives to the suspects, a police source would only say: "intelligence information." He said, however, that the information did not come from anyone at city hall.

The men's names cannot be published until they appear before a magistrates court judge this morning for remand.

Build nuclear power plant, Israeli expert recommends

By GIDDON RACHMAN
Special to the Jerusalem Post

Israel should go ahead with efforts to obtain a nuclear power plant, Uzi Eilam, director-general of the Israel Atomic Energy Commission, told a meeting of the Jerusalem Rotary Club on Wednesday.

Eilam said that the prospects for the development of nuclear power were looking up after the setbacks of recent years.

He revealed that several potential sites for nuclear power plants in Israel were being studied and said: "Our goal should be an agreement with an advanced technological and industrial power."

"Israel lacks the know-how to develop a plant by itself; moreover, this option does not make economic sense."

The Jimmy Carter years had seen a tightening of controls on the sale of nuclear technology by the U.S. to Israel, and slowed Israel's progress towards her nuclear goal. But under President Ronald Reagan the situation has eased.

Eilam did not consider Israel's failure to sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty as a stumbling block to the negotiation of a nuclear agreement. France, one of the leading developers of nuclear power, is not a signatory, he pointed out.

While acknowledging that nuclear power has drawbacks, Eilam said that development of solar energy is not advanced enough to make it a viable alternative. Israel, poor in natural resources, had a pressing need for an alternative source of power.

Eilam said that fears concerning the safety of nuclear energy are often exaggerated. Israeli nuclear waste would initially be returned to the supplier nation and later buried underground in the Negev. Nuclear plants could be built underground to make them invulnerable in case of war.

Movie scene at Western Wall nixed

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren has prevented a film about Holocaust survivors, starring Kirk Douglas, from including a scene at the Western Wall.

The film, "Remembrance of Love," is a fictional reconstruction of the lives of survivors, based on the Holocaust Survivors' Conference in Jerusalem last year.

Last night a major scene was to be filmed at the Western Wall, depicting the closing ceremony of the conference, at which Prime Minister Menachem Begin spoke.

The filmmakers, NBC, had earlier received approval to film at the Wall from the Religious Affairs Ministry. But this week the producers were informed that the Chief Rabbinate demanded the right to veto the film first.

At a meeting with the producers, Rabbi Goren demanded that changes be made in the script. The filmmakers refused to accept his censorship and decided to replace the scene at the Wall with one at Yad Vashem.

Man held in extortion of money from prostitute

TEL AVIV (Itim). — A man suspected of extorting money from a Tel Aviv prostitute and using tear gas and other violent means to force her to pay him was yesterday remanded into custody for 15 days by the Tel Aviv magistrates court.

The man, Yosef Azam, 34, is suspected of extorting the prostitute's money over a period of seven months, the police representative told the court. When the women refused to continue the payments, Azam allegedly sprayed tear gas on her and threatened to slash her face with a knife.

When Azam learned that the woman intended to go to the police, he kidnapped her, locked her up, took her money and then forced her to have sexual relations with a series of men, the court was told.

Police asked for the remand to protect the woman's life during the investigation and were ordered by the court to present a charge sheet at the end of the remand period.

Body of 2nd drowning victim washed ashore

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The body of the missing East Jerusalem teenager who disappeared off the Sea Palace beach in Bat Yam on Tuesday was washed up Wednesday evening on the shore opposite the Tel Aviv opera house, police said.

Police yesterday identified the victim as Nasser Abu Saria, 14, of Shuafat.

The boy was one of a group of 45 East Jerusalem youngsters who held an outing at the Sea Palace beach, where swimming is prohibited.

Another youngster drowned and six were treated in hospital after they were caught in a whirlpool just a few metres from shore. Two of the hospitalized youths are still listed in critical condition.

The Bat Yam municipality will post inspectors at the Sea Palace beach over the weekend to prevent swimmers from bathing there, a spokesman said yesterday.

Ahiaz's wife, two children 'feeling better'

By JEFFREY HELLER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The wife of pilot Aharon Ahiaz, being held by the PLO in Beirut, sounded optimistic yesterday as her husband's release appeared imminent.

"We're feeling a lot better today," Yael Ahiaz said about herself and her two young children. Speaking over the phone from her Herzliya home, she said she had made no plans for a welcome-home celebration. "First I want to see him with my own eyes," she said.

Ahiaz, a reserve Skyhawk pilot, was downed over Lebanon on the first day of the war. Israel made his release an unconditional demand for its agreement to the plan to allow the terrorists to leave besieged West Beirut.

Yael Ahiaz was reluctant to answer questions about her husband's civilian job or his plans for the future. "All details will emerge," she said. "We just have to be patient a little longer."

Tzuk Tamzur drilling stopped for three days

ARAD (Itim). — Drilling at the Tzuk Tamzur oil well east of Arad was suspended for three days, following radical changes in the well's flow during an experimental pumping yesterday morning.

"No conclusions about the well's eventual worth should be drawn from the temporary drilling stoppage," Energy Ministry spokesman Avishai Amir said yesterday.

He added that detailed measurements and tests will be performed during the stoppage, and that simultaneously, preparations will be made for the temporary production of oil from the well.

Car blown up

TIRA. — Unknown car thieves two days ago blew up a stolen car they drove to this village near Kfar Sava. This was the fourth stolen car disposed of at this Israeli Arab village in the same manner.

Police say the cars were stolen from Tel Aviv, Netanya and Kfar Sava and were used for criminal purposes before being destroyed. Tira village leaders have accused the police of not being able to handle the crime wave.

Curfew extended in Bombay while rioting, arson spread

BOMBAY (AP). — Rioting and arson sparked by a police rebellion broke out in more areas of Bombay yesterday, and Indian soldiers with rifles and automatic weapons patrolled the port city trying to restore order.

One person was seriously wounded when paramilitary troops and loyal policemen opened fire on a mob that attacked a security patrol in the city's Parel district, officials said.

A curfew was extended until 6 p.m. Friday in a half-dozen areas in northern and central Bombay, where day-long rioting Wednesday by police and some striking textile-mill workers who joined them left four persons dead and dozens injured. Hundreds of vehicles also were damaged in the eruption of violence.

The violence erupted after the state government banned the Maharashtra police employees' association on Tuesday. It had been agitating for a 40 per cent pay increase over the current starting salary equivalent to $36 per month.

The state government also fired 92 union members and arrested 22 for "treason and indiscipline."

About 4,500 of the city's 22,000 policemen blocked commuter trains and halted rush-hour traffic. Angry commuters began to riot and looted stores.

Seychelles troops hunting mutineers hiding in jungle

VICTORIA, Seychelles (UPI). — A 24-hour curfew remained in force on the main Seychelles island of Mahe yesterday as loyal government troops hunted down the remnants of army mutineers hiding in the thick tropical jungle surrounding the capital.

The curfew has been lifted on the Seychelles' 91 other coral islands 2,400 kilometres off the east coast of Africa. It was suspended for six hours on Mahe yesterday to allow residents to stock up on food and other supplies.

President Albert Rene in a broadcast to the nation appealed for calm and promised a return to normal life on the island within a few days.

Forty rebels have been captured or have surrendered, police officials said. Some of those still on the run were beginning to give up voluntarily: two walked into Radio Seychelles yesterday afternoon and surrendered.

The loyal troops, aided by Tanzanian soldiers, fought brief running gunbattles with small pockets of rebels in the hills on the north end of Mahe island for about two hours early yesterday.

Iran loses two aircraft, Iraq claims

NICOSIA. — Iran sent its warplanes raiding southern and central Iraqi regions yesterday and the Iraqi high command reported one enemy jetfighter and a helicopter gunship were shot down.

An Iraqi military communique reported that an unspecified number of Iranian jet fighters tried to penetrate air space over the southern Iraqi city of Basra but "were forced to flee" by anti-aircraft gunners.

One Iranian plane "was sighted exploding and crashing inside Iranian territory," said the communique. It claimed that "the enemy planes never reached their targets."

The helicopter, it said, was shot down in the central sector of the frontlines.

No casualty report was given. Meanwhile, the Iranian Oil Ministry yesterday denied Iraqi claims that its planes had bombed oil installations at Kharg Island, Iran's main oil terminal.

An Iraqi military communique on Wednesday said its planes had bombed Kharg, but gave no details of the damage. (AP, Reuters)

Another Philippine labour leader arrested

MANILA (UPI). — Another labour leader has been arrested in connection with an alleged plot by radical unionists and Communist rebels to mount a terror campaign and seize power next year.

Crispin Beltran, vice-chairman of the 500,000-member KNU (May 1 Movement), was picked up by police with two labour lawyers outside a Manila restaurant Wednesday evening and taken to a suburban military camp for questioning, a spokesman said.

KNU chairman Felixberto Olalia, 79, has been in the Camp Crane military stockade since last Friday on charges of inciting to rebellion and sedition.

Five would-be skyjackers executed in China

PEKING (AP). — The five men who were bludgeoned by passengers and crewmen when they tried to hijack a Chinese airliner to Taiwan on July 25 were executed by firing squad yesterday, Peking radio reported.

The radio said the five, charged with hijacking an airplane for counter-revolutionary purposes, were tried by the Shanghai Intermediate People's Court on August 10 and 11. Their death sentences were upheld by both the Shanghai High Court and China's Supreme People's Court, it added.

During this hijack attempt, passengers and crewmen attacked the five with mops, bottles, umbrellas and a fire, and the hijackers set off dynamite in a toilet, blowing a hole in the side of the plane, the passengers said.

The Soviet-made, propeller-driven Ilushin-18, carrying 72 passengers and a crew of eight, landed safely in Shanghai. Passengers included 19 Americans and 10 Japanese.

Another Soviet woman in space

MOSCOW (AP). — The Soviet Union sent the second woman ever into space yesterday along with two male cosmonauts, the Tass news agency reported.

Tass said that Sotikana Savitskaya, 34, was sent into space aboard the Soyuz T-7 along with cosmonauts Leonid Popov, the space commander, and Alexander Serebryov, the engineer.

She was identified as a cosmonaut-researcher.

The only other woman ever to have flown in space was Valentina Tereshkova of the Soviet Union in 1963.

If all goes according to plan, the Soyuz T-7 spacecraft can be expected to dock today with the orbital Salyut-7 station, on which cosmonauts Anatoly Bereznov and Vladimir Lubadov have spent more than three months.

BACK IN PRINT. — After nine days of government-imposed closure, the independent Turkish newspaper Gunes (The Sun) resumed publication yesterday. It was ordered closed by the military regime after it had carried a story reporting that Syria had supported Armenian terrorists who killed nine and wounded 22 in a raid on Ankara's main airport terminal on August 7.

Warsaw readies repair work in Victory Square

WARSAW (UPI). — City officials yesterday stepped up preparations for restoration work on central Victory Square aimed at least in part to end the tug of war over the floral cross constructed there daily as a shrine to opposition.

Half a dozen police vehicles parked in the square near the cross site and beefed-up police patrols prevented Poles from laying flowers to rebuild the cross, which, as every night this month, had been scraped up by authorities before dawn.

Three times in the past week riot police in full battle dress and at least twice backed by water cannon and tear gas had been sent in to clear the peaceful crowd that daily gathers to pray and sing around the floral monument.

City Transport yesterday announced that the bus terminal in the square would be removed to another plaza as of today, indicating that repaving and water-works repair announced early this month would begin soon.

Polish television Wednesday night ran a special programme to stress how badly the square's paving needed work and, ignoring the cross in the square itself, pointed out that two new flower crosses have been built outside two nearby churches.

End of gold teeth in USSR?

MOSCOW (Reuters). — Gold teeth that put a gleam in the smile of the Soviet Union's minority peoples could be on their way out.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda, in an article on abuses in Russian dentistry, said yesterday that the state had set aside tons of gold for making dental crowns and false teeth, but the larger the provision of gold, the greater the demand has grown.

"It is an unprecedented practice when dentists put gold crowns on perfectly healthy teeth," it said.

Pravda suggested it was high time gold was phased out of dental treatment in favour of porcelain crowns and false teeth.

Gold-crowned teeth are regarded as beautifying in many Russian southern republics and many beaming Georgians can often display a full gold-inlaid front set.

Red Brigades raid barracks, steal arms

ROME (AP). — Armed members of the Red Brigades raided an air force barracks on the outskirts of Rome early yesterday bound and gagged guards, and made off with automatic rifles and other arms, police said.

A caller to the newspaper Vita said the leftist Red Brigades claimed responsibility for the attack.

Ethiopians massacre Kenyan villagers

NAIROBI (UPI). — Ethiopian militia crossed the border into Kenya last week and massacred 29 persons including women and children before fleeing back into Ethiopia, the Kenyan government said yesterday.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs said the attack took place on August 18 at Mara Dantu village in the Mandera district that forms Kenya's northern border with Ethiopia and Somalia.

The ministry said 11 men, four women and 14 children were killed and one man and two children wounded.

The Ethiopian militia, a paramilitary volunteer force known as Mahabaras, stole 150 camels and 50 head of cattle after slaughtering the villagers.

Rightist acts worry W. German official

BONN (Reuters). — West German Interior Minister Gerhart Baum expressed alarm yesterday at the rapid increase in Neo-Nazi violence against foreigners.

His statement accompanied figures showing that the number of extreme rightist attacks on foreigners in West Germany rose by 150 per cent to 297 last year and continued to increase in the first half of this year.

LEBANON CAMPAIGN

Relief plans await approval

Jerusalem Post Reporter
BUREAUCRACY has a long arm. Many of the things that need to be done in rehabilitating the civilian population of South Lebanon are being impeded by the growing labyrinth of bureaucratic channels. Some programmes for emergency relief operations on behalf of homeless refugees are underway and have been reported in The Jerusalem Post. Other plans await approval.

There is some confusion in assessing exact needs, but there is agreement among the different relief organizations that the needs are many and varied. Even without knowing the extent of aid necessary or exactly how their money will be spent, Jerusalem Post readers continue to give generously to the Lebanon Campaign being conducted by The Post in conjunction with the Interfaith Jerusalem Public Committee.

Rabbi Harry K. Danziger, who sent contributions to both the Lebanon Campaign and the Soldiers Welfare Association from the Temple Israel (Memphis, Tennessee) Rabbi's Discretionary Fund, writes: "As an American Jew deeply committed to Israel and to the Jewish concern for the sanctity of all life, I appreciate your making available to me these vehicles for helping those in need on both sides of the current conflict."

Several donors have contributed more than once and the Jerusalem International YMCA this week sent in its fourth check, representing an accumulation of contributions from members, staff and guests. The Y's senior director, Rizek Abushari, is confident that many more contributions will be coming. Y members, staff and guests have so far raised $12,512.

Donations coming into the Lebanon Campaign this week added up to $555,004.50, increasing the total to $1,098,687.48. Despite bureaucracy, this money will be directed to a number of community service projects. The picture should be clearer next week after Economic Coordination Minister Ya'acov Meridor discusses matters with the cabinet. Meanwhile, the flow of money must continue so that when final decisions are made, the funds will be available to cover the costs. Programmes must be implemented before the onslaught of winter. Please make out your cheques to The Jerusalem Post Lebanon Campaign and send them to The Jerusalem Post, P.O.B. 81, 91000 Jerusalem.

Frantic world stock markets take pause to take profits

LONDON (Reuters). — The buying fever that gripped world financial markets this week cooled off yesterday as investors took a second look at the causes of the sudden boom and the prospects for economic recovery.

Stock markets in Asia and Europe lost some of their earlier gains while investors also took back profits in the markets for gold, foreign currencies and commodities as part of the general reassessment.

"I don't think it's a one-day wonder," Keith Percy, an analyst for the London stockbroking firm of Phillips and Drew, said of the rush into Wall Street that started on Tuesday and promptly blew away the gloom from markets around the globe.

Like some other brokers, Percy saw the gains as a necessary correction to the dismal state that financial markets had fallen into and was relatively optimistic that the markets would hold up for a while.

Henry Kaufman, the chief economist at the Salomon Brothers investment firm, proved himself the most influential of the legions of Wall Street advisers when he changed his mind on his long-held view that interest rates would head higher.

News that he now saw that lower U.S. interest rates would be sustained touched off feverish buying on Wall Street that spread over the next 48 hours to markets everywhere. But the rush subsided yesterday.

The sudden leaps in prices came as investors bet that easier credit would provide a spark for the sluggish U.S. economy and do much the same for other industrial nations.

But Kaufman and other analysts have tied their view of lower interest rates to a continued weakness in the U.S. economy that will reduce demand for loans by business, a linkage that has struck a note of caution for many investors who doubt the market's newly found optimism is justified.

SABOTAGE. — The Bader-Meinhof terrorist band failed in its attempt yesterday to destroy a radar antenna at the airfield of the U.S. army's European headquarters at Heidelberg, West Germany.

ENVOY WITH CLOUT

WOLF BLITZER reports from Washington on the crucial role being played by Israel's ambassador.

WASHINGTON. — Just before coming to Washington last February, Ambassador Moshe Arens had irritated some U.S. officials by criticizing aspects of the Reagan administration's policy in the Middle East.

The officials accordingly predicted that Arens would not have an easy time establishing close personal relations with the American leadership. They said that an ambassador should be more "diplomatic," meaning less outspoken in challenging the policies of his host government.

Arens's problems were compounded by his image as a hardliner. As chairman of the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee, the Herut politician had voted against the Camp David accords in 1978. The news media, reflecting this high-level U.S. concern, picked up on that theme.

Thus, in early March, The New York Times diplomatic correspondent Bernard Gwertzman wrote that Arens was "living up to his reputation as a plain-spoken hawk whose views on most Middle Eastern issues sometimes make Prime Minister Menachem Begin seem like a moderate." A few days later, ABC's popular Nightline television anchorman Ted Koppel said that Arens had brought to his new post "a reputation for toughness. Mr. Arens voted against the Camp David agreement and he remains sceptical as to its worth."

YET ONLY six months later, key Reagan administration officials are openly praising the Israeli envoy. Those same officials who earlier had predicted a chilly reception for him — there had even been speculation that the Americans would bypass the Israeli embassy in Washington by conducting most diplomatic business through the U.S. embassy in Tel Aviv — are now going out of their way to compliment Arens for his work.

This change in attitude has been most vividly demonstrated in recent days as word filtered back to the U.S. about Arens's apparently critical role in influencing Israel on the crisis in West Beirut. The Israeli envoy was described by U.S. officials as a "secret weapon" in convincing Jerusalem that Israel's long-range interests could best be promoted by helping the U.S. obtain a badly needed foreign-policy victory. This meant further Israeli flexibility in special U.S. envoy Philip Habib's negotiations to secure a peaceful PLO evacuation from West Beirut.

ON SUNDAY, August 8, Arens suddenly left Washington for Jerusalem. His mission, according to Israeli officials, was to bring to the cabinet a first-hand assessment of the thinking in the U.S. As one Israeli diplomat explained: "There's a limit to what can be conveyed in cables."

During the previous six months, Arens had become immersed in getting to know the U.S. Although he had grown up in Philadelphia, served in the U.S. Army and studied at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he returned to the U.S. after many years in Israel. He had to establish new contacts and get his finger on the pulse of the country. He did so by numerous speaking engagements and other public and private meetings. He quickly became a familiar face on American television.

At the same time, he managed to establish close ties with then-secretary of state Alexander Haig and other senior U.S. officials, including Under Secretary for Political Affairs Lawrence Eagleburger. Administration officials later pointed out that it was no mere coincidence that the new secretary of state, George Shultz, decided to meet Arens before any other ambassador. Since then, Arens has continued to meet with Shultz; they have also spoken regularly by telephone.

The Americans have come to recognize that Arens is no "right-wing kook" as one U.S. official had described him only a few months earlier. The ambassador has been effective in Washington because policy-makers have concluded that he has clout in Jerusalem.

ARENS has exploited the fact that he is a politician rather than a professional diplomat. As such, he has greater leeway in making statements and taking decisions. He can go to Jerusalem on the spur of the moment, meet with the prime minister, the defence minister, the foreign minister, the chief of staff, and sit in on cabinet meetings as a virtual equal.

Precisely because of his well-known reputation as a hardliner, U.S. officials say, a recommendation by Arens that Israel be more sensitive to U.S. concerns can be decisive in formulating Israeli policies.

"It's one thing for (former ambassador Ephraim) Evron to urge Begin to make more concessions," a U.S. official explained. "It's totally another thing for Arens to play that role. When he talks, people in Jerusalem have to listen."

Rightly or wrongly, the Americans believe that Arens's most recent visit to Israel was a turning point for Habib. They are giving the ambassador much of the credit for the breakthrough. Arens, they said, simply explained how deeply U.S. public support for

Ambassador to Washington Moshe Arens

(Israel Sun)

Israel had eroded since the fighting erupted, and the cabinet responded by compromising on the remaining obstacles in the negotiations.

That may be oversimplified, given the nature of Arens's personal views on the use of military force. Still, the Americans believe that Arens bluntly laid out to the Israeli leadership the likely very negative U.S. response to an Israeli assault against the remaining PLO strongholds in West Beirut. He also pointed out how Israel would benefit from an agreement. Again, rightly or wrongly, they suspect that his report was essential in avoiding further bloodshed.

FOR ARENS, the immediate impact of a Habib success is likely to be positive. Practically all of Washington's important doors are now open to him. At a recent nationally televised White House news conference, Reagan referred to Arens by name in making a particular point. It is doubtful whether Reagan knows the name of more than one or two other Washington ambassadors.

In defending Israel, Arens is realistic enough to recognize that he has not turned America's thinking around. He has scored some points, especially on television. But he knows that he and his embassy staff have a long way to go in winning more friends for Israel.

The situation remains tenuous at best as the administration begins to press for broader settlements in Lebanon and on the Palestinian question. But there is widespread agreement that Arens has got off on the right foot.

Hollywood possibilities

TELEREVUE/Philip Gillon

THERE ARE enormous television possibilities in the PLO terrorist lists that are to be given to special envoy Philip Habib. We have seen the development of the plot in a thousand thrillers and a few Panorama documentaries. I assume that the film will be made in Hollywood and not in Israel, since our TV refuses to waste money on indigenous products.

The film opens as the lists are complete. They are put into a slim black despatch case which is chained to Habib's wrist by a stainless steel handcuff. He is rushed off at high speed in a bullet-proof vehicle to the American embassy in Beirut, hotly pursued by souped-up cars driven by agents of the PLO and the Mossad, firing machine-guns.

At the embassy four doubles of Habib pop out of the woodwork. To the wrist of each an exact duplicate of the black despatch case is chained. The real Habib surrenders, his spectacles and is given blue contact lenses.

He is dressed as the oldest son of the American ambassador in Beirut. The four doubles and the real Habib leave the embassy, one in the bullet-proof car, another on a high-powered motorcycle, another in a helicopter, another in a battered Model T Ford and the real Habib on a skateboard.

The Mossad, being so much cleverer than the PLO, gets three of the doubles, while the PLO gets the fourth. They hack off the despatch cases. No lists. So off they go after the real Habib. Despite the brilliance of his disguise, he is given away by the despatch case. But after a breathtaking pursuit he reaches a special commando unit of the U.S. Marines waiting for him in a Beirut cove.

A MEMBER of this special unit is Farrah Fawcett who helps him to put on a scuba suit — no mean feat with a despatch case chained to his wrist — and to engage in a protracted love scene on the beach, also a great achievement because of that case. Then off they dive into the sea, escorted by a shoal of deep-sea divers, to swim underwater to an offshore submarine.

Unfortunately, the time spent in love-play enables the Mossad and the PLO to get help to them, so while they swim underwater they are attacked by agents; not to mention sharks and octopuses (or octopi). One by one their escorts drop by the wayside. Farrah is captured by the Mossad. But Habib, his scuba suit torn to shreds by knife-slashes and shark-bites, and his arms festooned in octopuses (or octopi), makes it to the submarine.

Move to whichever luxury hotel is prepared to pay the producers for a plug. William Conrad, shorn of his moustache, is acting the role of Arik Sharon entertaining the chief of the Mossad. "Sink the submarine," he declares, his jaw (or jowls) set, "without damaging the despatch case."

"But what about the effect on Israel-American relations," asks the Mossad man anxiously. "Romnie won't like it."

William Sharon shrugs his massive shoulders. "We and the Americans have the same objectives in the long run. Ronnie will learn to like it. Or he'll have to lump it." The Mossad man is obdurate. "I have to have full cabinet approval for such an action."

Arik Conrad signs his name flamboyantly on a table-napkin. "You have it," he says through his teeth.

The Israel Navy drop depth charges and sink the sub. But Habib, in a new scuba suit and without his octopuses (or octopi), gets out through an escape hatch, and swims to Greece. As he is washed up exhausted on a beach, Farrah, disguised as an Armenian belly-dancer, finds him. Somehow she has escaped from the Mossad.

After a protracted love scene — sea and sand seem to have an aphrodisiac effect on them, as such things have on so many people — she manages to smuggle him out of Greece disguised as a statue of the god Bacchus chained to a despatch case.

AND SO ON and so forth. Eventually he gets to the White House. After giving the envoy a congratulatory hug and the Purple Heart, Reagan orders that the despatch case should be locked in the deepest chamber of Fort Knox. Unfortunately, nobody knows how to break the chain, so they have to put the envoy in the chamber together with the case. His only consolation is that they lock Farrah in with him. The stone floor is not the same as a beach, but it has the same effect on them. Meanwhile, back in that hotel, William Arik Conrad Sharon says to the Mossad, "Break open Fort Knox, even if you have to use an atomic bomb to do it."

The Mossad men turn the colour of the bellies of octopuses (or octopi). "Nobody has ever opened Fort Knox," they whisper, "it's impossible."

"Nothing is impossible for a Jew and an Israeli," says their chief. "Let this be another Israeli first."

The scene moves to a harem in Damascus, where Yasser Arafat — acted by Yasser Arafat, Hollywood could find no more suitable ham — is tenderly stroking the hair of a midget dressed as a child. Same dialogue as in the Jerusalem hotel, except substitute "Arab" and "PLO" for "Jew" and "Israeli."

Can Fort Knox really be opened like a sardine tin? Who will get the lists first, the PLO or the Mossad? Keep your eye on the box for future episodes.

ACTUALLY, there is no real need to go to all that trouble to get the lists. All the Mossad need to do is ask me: through Extra Sensory perception, I was there at the scene when Habib was compiling the information. I see him clearly in my mind's eye at a table, with long lines of terrorists queuing up like Israelis at a Ministry of Interior office trying to get passports.

"What's your name?" "Abdul Nasser."

"Address?" "The Bunkers, West Beirut."

Habib, a man of extraordinary perception, who has mastered the way of the Middle East, now asks the all-important question for identification, as in Israel: "What's your father's name? Your abu?" (He has also learned Arabic.) "Ibrahim."

Your name is Abdul Nasser Ibn Ibrahim, and your address is the Bunkers, West Beirut?"

"Awwa." And so on, 13,000 times. In due course the word will go out from the defence minister to the Mossad. "Get this guy Ibn. He seems to be all over the place."

NOMENCLATURE is all-important. I hope everybody noticed that I referred in my first notice to "PLO terrorist." BBC's Panorama would never talk about PLO "terrorists." At one stage they might have called them "guerrillas." As time passed, the word "guerrillas" got blurred by crimes into being a synonym for "terrorists," so "the terrorists" became "freedom fighters." This term too got linked to abominable crimes, so now the BBC talks about "PLO fighters."

You can always tell if commentators are sympathetic to Israel if they call our action in Lebanon an "incursion." Enemies speak of "aggression." Critics who are not out-and-out foes use "invasion," an indication that they are somewhat opposed but not altogether antagonistic.

The Lebanese Christians ruined themselves by the use of the name "Phalangists." This identified them clearly as supporters of Franco, and they became "right-wing Phalangists" opposed to "left-wing Moslems." As a result of this nomenclature, nobody in the media noticed what happened in Lebanon for several years.

OH DEAR, I have rambled on for columns without dealing with television shows that I saw this week. I suspect that I have done so, because, subconsciously, I have tried to avoid dealing with Golda.

Perhaps my expectations were too high. Golda Meir was an extraordinary woman, Ingrid Bergman is a very talented and hard-working actress. I assumed that the combination would tell into an outstanding film. Instead we were given a vulgar, insensitive, ham-handed, Hollywood version of Golda, Zionism and the Kibbutz, compared to which Exodus was as subtle as I, Claudius.

The film got off to a particularly bad start with that junk about Golda going back to the Milwaukee schoolhouse and finding it full of picaninies to whom she told the story of pogroms and Zionism. Somebody told me this was based on truth. So what? Why couldn't they tell her story straight, beginning with the pogrom? Was the idea to prove that Zionism could interest blacks?

Captain Spock of the Enterprise was light years away from the tortured Jewish intellectual whom Golda married, and whom she forced to have the courage of her principles and to build up the land of his dreams with his own reluctant hands, instead of talking about it in the U.S.

Bergman was conscientious, and gets a mark for effort, but no more. The whole show reminded me of Rudyard Kipling's soldiers' sons, given an imperialist address by a politician, and calling him, "a jelly-bellied flag-flapper." Golda, with her great virtues and great faults, was too remarkable a woman to be polished off by Hollywood as a mere flag-flapper. Let us hope that future episodes will be better.

Tree worship

TORA AND FLORA
Louis I. Rabinowitz

Portion of the Week, 2 Shoftim. Deut. 16:18-21.9. The verse discussed is 16:21.

The worship of trees definitely took place in ancient times in Israel. Jeremiah accuses the people of his time, "upon every high hill, and under every leafy tree thou playest the harlot" (2:30), and the prostitution referred to is not sexual indulgence but "a-whoring after other gods". In 1 Kings 14:23 we similarly read of the building of the Asherah "on every high hill and under every leafy tree". This idolatrous tree worship was indulged in the king Hoshea (1 Kings 17:16) and continued until in his sweeping reforms Hezekiah cut them down. (ibid. 18:4).

The prohibition against tree worship is laid down in the portion which we read this weekend. It is couched in strange and puzzling language. "Thou shalt not plant thee an Asherah of any kind of tree beside the altar of the Lord which thou shalt make thee." The italicized words surely convey the impression that the prohibition is confined to planting an Asherah adjacent to the altar erected for the worship of the true God, but apparently it does not extend to its siting somewhere else!

Rashi, however, explains that the prohibition referred to in this verse applies to the act of planting the tree, even if he has not indulged in its worship. The prohibition therefore includes anything which may lead to, or be construed as, the possibility of worship.

After the withdrawal

By CHAIM HERZOG

AS THE date of the evacuation of Beirut by the PLO approaches it is essential to maintain a correct perspective in order to evaluate the next steps that are to be taken.

In assessing its new moves, Israel's approach must be based on brutal realism, understanding of the power play in Lebanon, appreciation of the implications of any such moves on the Arab population in the administered territories, and a considerable measure of self-interest.

Once world opinion had made the withdrawal of the PLO from West Beirut the criterion whereby the success or failure of Israel's operation in Lebanon would be judged, Israel was left with no alternative but to pursue its aims in Beirut until the matter was resolved. Once this has been achieved, Israel must re-evaluate its position in Lebanon — and the sooner the better.

The PLO evacuation will present many problems, for all the parties involved. It is fair to assume that each constituent of the PLO will try to leave behind an underground nucleus that can disrupt life in Beirut whenever it can, and that will take advantage of any weakness in future Lebanese governments.

Whether or not they will be successful will depend on the Lebanese government and the quality of its leadership. It must, however, be remembered that the PLO will do their utmost to circumvent the terms of the agreement reached — they would not be true to character if they did not do so.

For Israel, the principal purposes are, and must continue to be, the withdrawal of the PLO leadership and forces from Beirut, and the creation of a zone north of the Israeli border, free of forces hostile to Israel.

All other issues are secondary to these and Israel should concentrate on their implementation, to the exclusion of others.

THE PLO could gain a considerable amount of prestige from a well-staged withdrawal from Beirut, and will do everything they can to convert the withdrawal into a moral victory.

Whether or not the PLO emerges looking good will depend, to a very great degree, on the effectiveness of Israeli information, and on the willingness of the Lebanese people who have been rid of a foreign scourge, to open their mouths and give vent to their opinions. The Lebanese factor in the information battle which is bound to erupt, will be critical.

If Israel can convince the world that the defeat of the PLO has given a new lease on life to the Palestinian Arabs, and has opened up the possibility for them to speak their minds freely, to adopt a path of negotiation and compromise rather than that of inflexible confrontation, then the departure of the PLO from Beirut will be a defeat for the terrorist organization and the entire international terrorist conspiracy.

Such an opportunity has been given to the Palestinian Arabs, and to Jordan as well. Whether or not King Hussein and the Arabs of the West Bank and Gaza will have the courage to seize this opportunity is a moot point.

If one judges by the sentiments being expressed on many sides by the Palestinian Arabs, they are looking for leadership in a new direction: a direction other than the one which brought to the débacle and the evacuation of Beirut.

Since 1976, Israel has helped the Christian community in Lebanon to defend itself. The net result of Israel's efforts, including Operation Peace for Galilee, has been to give Lebanon an opportunity to establish a central government, and to allow the leader of the Christian forces, Bashir Jemayel, to declare his candidacy for the presidency of Lebanon.

Israel's action in this respect was undoubtedly justified, but now is the time to stop reacting to the events in Lebanon as it did during the Lebanese civil war, when the Christian community saw Israel as its saviour, and begin to pursue a clearly thought out Israeli policy.

THE PASSIVE position adopted by the Phalangists in the battle for Beirut has been quite different from the situation envisaged by Israel. There seems to have been a different understanding with the Phalangists, but their actions did not match their words. Over the past couple of years the Phalange has encouraged the Israeli operation in Lebanon, but once it began, they adopted a passive role instead of one of active support.

The explanation for this is Bashir Jemayel's decision to run for the presidency, and the irreconcilability of presidential candidacy and an active military partnership with Israel. He is also loath to sever the links between the Christians and the mainstream of the Arab world.

There has been much coming and going between Phalange headquarters and Damascus of late. It is clear that Syria's price for any support it may give to Bashir Jemayel's candidacy — for instance by allowing the Lebanese deputies from the areas under its control to create the necessary quorum by attending parliament and by authorizing their vote — will be in terms of guarding its special interests in the Bekaa Valley, and conceivably in the currency represented by Israel's special relations with the Phalangists.

For this and other reasons, I would hazard an intelligent guess that the first element in Lebanon which will ultimately urge the withdrawal of Israel will be Bashir Jemayel's Phalangists. This will be done within the framework of a demand for the withdrawal of all foreign forces.

It is very doubtful that he will sign a formal peace treaty with Israel, but will not be opposed to creating a de facto status of peace between the two countries.

Rather than reacting to developments that seem inevitable within the tortured context of Lebanon's politics, Israel must take the initiative in its own policy making.

ONCE THE PLO leaves Beirut, the city promises to become an international imbroglio comprising not one Gordian Knot, but many. It is certain that there will be a long, dragged out series of political crises in a new Levantine morass.

Wise Israeli policy must then dictate an immediate withdrawal of Israeli forces from the city of Beirut. The withdrawal should be to a distance sufficient to lift the siege of Beirut, but close enough to threaten the city should the PLO or the Syrians re-enter or re-establish themselves within it.

At this point, having achieved the principal aim of ridding Beirut of the PLO, Israel should address itself to its second and far more important aim, that of guaranteeing its security as regards Southern Lebanon.

Here Israel can remain removed from the centre of Lebanon's politics in Beirut, out of the spotlight of world attention focused on that city, and can concentrate on its immediate security problem in Southern Lebanon.

These arrangements should, indeed must, be based not only on satisfactory arrangements with the Lebanese Government and the Lebanese Army, but more important, with the militias in the area of interest to Israel, south of the Awali River.

Israel will have to rely to a great extent on Major Haddad's forces, but it must also seek new and special relationships with other elements. Living as we do in a predominantly Moslem Middle East, it is essential that Israel create a network of relations with the Shia elements in Lebanon, which today constitute 40-50 per cent of the population of that country, and 70 per cent of the population of Southern Lebanon.

Israel should also develop a special relationship with the Lebanese Druse community. If Jumblatt's group is unwilling to abandon its pro-PLO and extreme left-wing orientation, then there is an alternative element within the Druse community which could be sponsored and strengthened by Israel, with the assistance of the Israeli Druse community.

Israel will only be assured of peace on its northern border if the arrangements with the local militias are such as to guarantee full cooperation as regards Israel's security.

By concentrating its forces in Southern Lebanon it will be possible for Israel not only to negotiate the necessary security and political arrangements with Lebanon, either a peace treaty or a de facto peaceful, open border, but the withdrawal of the PLO and Syrian forces from all Lebanon can be insisted upon in return for Israel's withdrawal from Southern Lebanon.

THE LEBANESE operation has once again spotlighted the Palestinian refugee problem. It would be a serious mistake to rebuild the refugee camps and thus perpetuate the tragedy. The Palestinian population in Lebanon are, for the most part, Palestinian Arabs who left what is today the State of Israel. Their origins were mainly in Haifa and the towns and villages of Galilee.

Even though begged at the time by the Jewish leadership in Haifa to remain, they listened to the extreme Palestinian leadership and left, assuming that they would return in the wake of victorious Arab forces. Their return to Israel now is an impracticable proposition, and they must be resettled permanently in other countries.

Why should not an international effort be made now to solve the Palestinian refugee problem by finding homes immediately for the 300,000 refugees in Lebanon. Quotas can be taken up not only by Arab countries but also by the U.S., traditional haven for refugees, and all those countries in Europe and elsewhere that have shed so many tears over the Palestinian Arab refugees and have done so little for them.

This subject is now central, and Israel must exploit world attention to take the initiative, and force the rest of the world to share responsibility for the solution of the Palestinian Arab refugee problem.

This is another of the opportunities presented by Operation Peace for Galilee. It is now possible to remove an element of friction in the Middle East. This opportunity should be seized upon.

Policy based on fiction

By SHMUEL KATZ

PRESIDENT REAGAN made a significant statement in Washington last Friday. "If we look now," he said, "at the stories that are beginning to come out and some that have been made public, the PLO was literally a government and an armed force in another nation and beholden in no way to that other nation." (Jerusalem Post, 15 August).

With all due respect to the American president, his words bring to mind the story of the Irishman in Dublin who, meeting his Jewish neighbour in the street one fine Sunday morning, punched him in the nose and knocked him down. He subsequently justified his action on the ground that the Jews had killed Christ. When it was pointed out to him that the charge related to an event of some 2,000 years earlier, he explained that he personally had heard about it only that morning.

The U.S. Government probably did not know every detail of the way the PLO, with help from the Syrians, were for seven years destroying every strand of the fabric of the Lebanese state. The PLO committed every possible crime of violence and intimidation against the Lebanese. The U.S. probably did not know of every single act of robbery, rape and torture, of every murder of some man, woman or child.

The tearing apart of Lebanon, however, and the establishment of "a government in another nation," began with the armed assault by the PLO and their Lebanese Moslem allies on the Christians in Beirut in April 1975. Did the U.S. Ambassador in Beirut not notice then, nor in the following 18 months, the battles raging around him in the city? In that period alone, some 80,000 people were killed.

Did Washington get no reports over the years on the ruthless PLO take-over of large parts of the country, or the influx into Beirut of tens of thousands of Christians (and indeed some Moslems) fleeing from the reign of terror of that "government" of the PLO in the south?

The Lebanese Ambassador to the UN, Edouard Ghorro, found it possible (on October 14, 1976) to describe to the General Assembly the activities of the PLO in his country —

"They transformed most, if not all, of the refugee camps into military bastions around our major cities. Moreover, common-law criminals fleeing from Lebanese justice found shelter and protection in the camps...Palestinian elements belonging to various splinter organizations resorted to kidnapping Lebanese, and sometimes foreigners, holding them prisoner, questioning them and sometimes even killing them... They committed all sorts of crimes in Lebanon and also escaped Lebanese justice in the protection of the camps.

That was only the beginning. Six more years of the terror, growing worse from year to year, had yet to be endured before the people of Lebanon were liberated by Israel's successful offensive against the PLO. Throughout those years the American administrations did not raise a voice against the barbaric take-over of a nation and a state, nor lift a finger to prevent or mitigate it. Its policies were, by all the signs, calculated to perpetuate it.

ISRAEL now faces a period of unprecedented international pressure to cajole it into making new concessions, which will be increasingly inimical to her security and destructive of her national rights in Western Eretz Yisrael. One of the lessons inadequately learnt and now sharply illuminated by the Lebanese tragedy, is that the U.S. State Department will, unblinkingly, distort elementary facts.

Among the fictions solemnly promoted by Washington during Lebanon's agony was that a free and independent Lebanese government was functioning in Beirut. Everybody knew that the Sarkis government was a helpless puppet of Damascus, and that in the south, even its formal writ had been forcibly usurped by the PLO. Washington also insisted that the Syrian occupiers were a "peace-keeping force," and that the only obstacle to complete control of Lebanon by the "independent" government was the recalcitrant Major Sa'ad Haddad.

ISRAEL DID not need the Lebanese experience to learn how unblushingly State Department doctrines adhere to Arab mythology. Ever since the First World War, State Department policy has been marked by hostility to Jewish national aspirations. It narrowly failed to prevent American support for the UN partition resolution of 1947, which involved the rise of a Jewish State. Ever since, it has, broadly speaking, been identified with the outlook of Saudi Arabia.

The fiction of a "homeless Palestinian people," at the core of the perception that the so-called Palestinian problem is the key to peace in the Middle East, was dramatized by the emergence of the PLO and its terror (sponsored by all the Arab states); and for the past decade, PLO violence has been the instrument for "demonstrating" the "plight" of the "Palestinian people."

With the defeat of the PLO and its true nature exposed, the danger has now arisen that when the dust of battle settles, the myth of the "urgency" and the dimensions of the "plight" will be seen in their true proportions. That is why, when the PLO got out of Beirut, Saudi Arabia, Egypt have already begun pressing Washington for immediate action to force upon Israel the concessions and withdrawals required by their formula for solving the "Palestinian problem." What they want is complete Israeli surrender to their demands.

The latest fiction, obediently embraced by the State Department, is that the defeat of the PLO has made the solution to the "Palestinian problem" more urgent.

The Israeli Government should lose no time in making it plain that it certainly does not intend now to submit itself to new pressures for concessions. When the time is ripe for negotiations over Judea, Samaria and Gaza, the first item on its agenda must be the persistent declarations and actions of the Egyptian Government against the letter and spirit of the Camp David agreement. That, too, however will have to wait until the truly more urgent problems of Israel's relations with Lebanon and of Syria's role in the area are dealt with.

However these evolve, the central fact emerging from the painful events in Lebanon is the drastic change in the correlation of forces in the Middle East, with its clear, unexpected impact on the global confrontation between East and West. It is essential therefore that the Israeli Government give itself time to evaluate the much stronger diplomatic position in which it finds itself as a result of the war in Lebanon, and to decline any substantive negotiations until the meaning of that change has been digested — by Israel itself as well as by the Arab States and the U.S.

Precisely in this context the government should surely realize that the strongest card the U.S. has to play against Israel is not a matter of justice or right or equity, but the threat — or the implied threat — of "sanctions." The years that the locusts have eaten cannot now be restored, but it is not too late even now to promulgate a new economic policy in Israel designed to reduce "dependence" on the U.S. and to develop in the people of this country the sense of self-dependence which has patently become an essential factor in national security and a prime condition for political independence.

Abuse of freedom

refusal to aid it or give its members sanctuary. It was said that Lebanon might now regain its sovereignty. There were even some who praised Israel for striking a blow against international terror, thus doing a service for all mankind.

Here and there, although not to a sufficient degree, one read about PLO atrocities against Lebanese citizens, about captured arms stores, about Lebanese sympathy toward the IDF, and about PLO exploitation of the United Nations, for example, by using the UN school at Sibilin, near Sidon, for military training.

MANY CORRESPONDENTS covering the war violated the most elementary norms of fairness and professional ethics in their reports and commentary. Some of them were busy spreading propaganda instead of writing fair, objective reports.

For example, reporters would pass along fictitious figures for civilian casualties without noting the source of the figures or trying to verify them. We now know that the source was the PLO, which spread these figures as part of its psychological warfare campaign.

Unfortunately, international relief organizations helped disseminate these malicious anti-Israel reports, sometimes in order to stimulate contributions in their home countries. Communist and leftist elements played a conspicuous role in stirring up hostility.

Some correspondents were innocent conduits for misinformation, but quite a few were malicious. Many articles mixed news reports with hostile commentary. On television programmes around the world, old film clips were often screened along with the day's reports, giving viewers the false impression that they were seeing an account of current developments.

We know of reporters who were accused by their superiors of being too pro-Israel, and even of some whose services were terminated for that reason.

ANOTHER very interesting phenomenon turned up in the media coverage of the war in Lebanon. It became clear that there was a fairly close connection between a country's official government position and the media reaction in that country. And this does not mean totalitarian states, but countries that recognize freedom of the press. It was quite clear to a number of European states where both the press and the government were particularly hostile. In contrast, there was understanding, even sympathy and support, in most Latin American countries.

The position of the media in the United States is a complex subject in itself. Initial attitudes changed as the operation continued, and the harsh television footage multiplied; distortions and tendentious reporting could be discerned.

The connection between a government's position and the media reaction warrants research. This would also have to explain the persistent disregard by the international media of the terrible violence that had plagued Lebanon ever since the mid-1970s, taking 60,000-100,000 lives. After Operation Peace for Galilee was launched, the same media suppressed information about the unparalleled IDF efforts to avoid or minimize such civilian losses, even at the expense of its own soldiers.

Most foreign correspondents ignored what they were shown about the return of normal life in Southern Lebanon and the warm reception given the IDF.

It should be added that the internal debate in Israel has also been highlighted in the international media, beyond any reasonable proportions, in a way that has not improved Israel's image.

THE BEHAVIOUR of the international press in Operation Peace for Galilee has been called a "media pogrom." The often distorted, even malicious, coverage has begun to attract a certain amount of attention in the profession. A lead article in The Guardian of London on July 14 condemned the hypocrisy of television reports. The next day, the New York Post denounced the PLO's propaganda war and its distorted figures of civilian casualties. Martin Peretz published a deeper analysis of the phenomenon of distorted reporting in the New Republic of August 2. A number of other journalists are now looking into media conduct during the war and the damage to journalistic ethics.

One-sided and unbalanced reports are especially prevalent in television, which aims for the dramatic and the sensational. On a number of occasions in recent years, foreign cameramen in this country were suspected of planning, or actually caught preparing, provocative or fabricated reports; no steps against them were taken. It is not surprising that the idea has taken root that you can do anything in Israel, even violate the law, by misleading the military censor, for example, or smuggling out material without the review required by law.

In the pursuit of sensationalism, the cameramen prefer to cover scenes of ruin and death rather than the return to normal life in Sidon and Tyre. Most Western television networks are commercial, competitive operations; perhaps we are naive to expect them to be "balanced and fair."

THE MEDIA, especially television, are now the main source of anti-Israel attitudes throughout the world. Israeli critics make things easy for themselves by simply accusing those responsible for hasbara, such as the IDF spokesman and the Foreign Ministry.

These critics ignore the growing power of the media. One can ask whether considerations of field security should be allowed to override the requests of foreign journalists, if this leads to hostile coverage. But Israel went to war to destroy the PLO, not to satisfy reporters' need for a story. The IDF cannot let journalistic convenience be its primary consideration. Hasbara is very important, but it is only one factor in the overall situation. The experts — the IDF — must decide when security needs really outweigh the hasbara damage, assuming they are prepared to examine their own decisions carefully.

There is no room here for a full description of the aims, means and methods of the Foreign Ministry's information activities in Israel and abroad. Suffice it to say that the main goals are to win sympathy and support for Israel's political and military policy aims (and, at other times, its economic and cultural goals), and, if possible, to cancel out or reduce the damage caused by hostile propaganda.

In recent years, one of its main concerns has been to expose the true nature of the PLO before world public opinion. The PLO's desire to destroy the State of Israel and its central role in international terrorism have been emphasized in every way possible.

LONG BEFORE Operation Peace for Galilee, the ministry was distributing large quantities of material about Lebanon in general and the PLO's behaviour there in particular. The groundwork was thus laid in advance. With the start of the Operation, the ministry rushed into action with all the means at its disposal. Israel's position won wide publicity in the world media, and its envoys were generally given the opportunity to be interviewed even by those newspapers and radio and television stations that did not support, or even denounced, Israel's action.

When the media distortion of news from Lebanon became clear, the ministry invited dozens of journalists and politicians to visit Israel, and tour Lebanon, to see what had really happened and to meet with Lebanese citizens in order to learn what they had suffered during the years of PLO rule. A great deal of material has already been published as a result of these visits. But it has not been able to repair the damage caused by distorted TV coverage. The ministry also helped Lebanese citizens who wished to travel abroad to defend their country's interests and describe its tragic suffering to the world.

In short, the ministry had prepared itself for a possible confrontation with the PLO in Lebanon. But it is not always possible to predict every changing development. This is particularly true of the action in Lebanon, a highly-filmed "open war," conducted in built-up, heavily populated areas, accessible to the press and to international television.

Israel's national security interests dictated a war with the PLO. Under the prevailing circumstances there was a price to pay, to the hasbara field as in others. It is unlikely that any administrative structure different from the current Israeli information system would have produced different solutions — or results — from those detailed above. Certainly we must study what happened and try to learn the proper lessons. One thing is already clear: in any future war or political crisis that Israel is liable to face, the powerful influence on the political process of the media, especially television, must be taken into account in deliberations on the overall political-military picture. Israel cannot allow itself to ignore this factor. It will also be necessary to consider how a democratic country that believes in freedom of the press can defend itself from abuse of this freedom by foreign correspondents. The matter should, perhaps, be taken up by the Knesset.

The writer is assistant director-general of the Foreign Ministry and head of its Hasbara Department.

Menachem Begin

David Levy

Yoram Aridor

Shimon Peres

THE LONG GOOD-BYE

PUBLIC FACES/Mark Segal

TIME WILL TELL whether Premier Menachem Begin's promise to hand over "to another minister" in 1984 was only another exercise in hair-baiting. Our longest-serving cabinet minister, Yosef Burg commented on the statement this week by saying: "Yes, a vow, not a vow, it was only to his wife, Aliza, after all, and I'm sure that when the time comes she'll beg him to change his mind."

At any rate, it has already caused minor earthquakes at Meitzudat Ze'ev, the Herut Party HQ, with the longtime alliance between Deputy Premier David Levy and Finance Minister Yoram Aridor coming apart at the seams. Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, after a mild flirtation with Defence Minister Ariel Sharon, has now switched to Aridor's camp. I gather the shadowy, was Shamir's harsid, Herut Knesset faction chairman Ronnie Milo.

My Herutnik pals advise me that Aridor and Shamir decided to combine forces after Levy began to sound off his leadership ambitions, making it clear that he did not support Shamir, the hitherto agreed candidate.

The rupture between the two former rivals in the Herut Histadrut faction came when Aridor decided to challenge Levy for the chairmanship of the party's pivotal steering committee, which will control the formation of the new central committee that might be asked to choose our next prime minister.

Aridor and Shamir enjoy the support of three up-and-coming challengers for Levy's crown as leader of Herut's Oriental proletarian constituency — David Magen, Meir Shafir and Moshe Katrav.

Levy's party rivals claim he lost the Beersheba branch to Shamir in the recent party polls, and that his brother-in-law, Amiram Edri lost the leadership of the Haifa branch to an Aridor supporter, Deputy Knesset Speaker Meir Cohen, at the same time.

Virshupski told me that since the present government could hardly be replaced, "the most democratic element in it" — (Sharon) should be obliged to go.

Meanwhile, born-again Herutnik Akiva Nof has tabled a question to Deputy Premier and Liberal Party chairman Simha Ehrlich: "Does the minister know the identity of the senior ministerial source who urged Sharon's dismissal, as reported in Newsweek and other publications?"

WAS THERE or wasn't there collusion between Jerusalem and Washington over Operation Peace for Galilee? Labour's Gad Yassobi this week asked Premier Begin to clarify the matter, after Sharon's recent statement to the U.S. media that he had apprised the Reagan Administration of his plans 10 days before the war began.

I gather that Ronnie Milo has been prevailed upon to let Agudat Yisrael's Avraham Shapira stay on as coalition executive chief. I gather that Finance Minister Aridor wanted Shapira to stay on because of the many good turns he did him in his various positions, including the Cabinet Economic Committee and the Knesset Finance Committee.

PRESIDENT Yitzhak Navon has taken wife Ofira, daughter Na'ama and son Erez on a summer holiday. They will be staying at Kibbutz Dafne on the northern border, at the Dan Carmel in Haifa and at the Dan Caesarea.

Also holidaying up north will be Premier Begin. He plans to keep a promise to Moshe Gross, proprietor of Nahariya's posh Carlton Hotel, that he would come back for a vacation when things quieted down.

When I called him, Gross said he was delighted by the prospect of entertaining the Begins. Although his hotel, like the rest of the town, was packed with visitors, he would always find suitable accommodation for the prime minister and his wife.

While Finance Minister Aridor is off to Europe and America on a fund-raising trip and Commerce and Industry Minister Gideon Patti is in South Africa for the same purpose, Tourism Minister Avraham Shafir has left for Mexico to attend the World Travel Organization's annual congress at Acapulco. Accompanying him is his media counselor, Zvi Rimon, and his director-general Rafael Farber.

Before leaving, Aridor managed to celebrate the enactment of the bill for taxation under inflationary conditions, having stymied opponents, especially in the Liberal Party.

Still unknown is the identity of the backers of the expensive advertising campaign against the law; it was addressed to Begin and signed by "representatives of thousands of self-employed." Enquiry revealed that a number of Liberal Party politicians were behind the campaign, and that party economic council chairman MK Yitzhak Zeiger wants Attorney-General Yitzhak Zamir to investigate the matter.

Aridor, meanwhile, has lost the services of Arnold Sherman, with the latter's return to his regular post at El Al at the conclusion of a six-month stint at the Finance Ministry. Sherman's place as media counselor has been taken by Benny Friedman, former spokesman of the northern police district. Sherman has published a book about the Lebanese crisis, entitled The Shattered Cedar.

THERE IS reason to believe that Labour Party chairman Shimon Peres's flying visit to Paris has repaired some of the damage done by Begin's denunciation of France and paved the way for an official visit by the premier to Paris in October. Anyhow, it hasn't helped Peres that he has acted as a loyal opposition during recent visits to Washington, Amsterdam and Paris and taken care not to criticize the government when abroad. Begin has shown his appreciation by speaking of forming a committee to investigate the conduct of members of the opposition in wartime.

Between trips abroad, Peres has had to walk a tightrope, endeavouring to keep his party and the alignment with Mapam intact, and being accused by hawks like Michael Zohar of over-protecting the dovish Yossi Sarid.

The war has had an effect on the not-so-United Kibbutz Movement — despite the activist line taken by Kibbutz Meuhad ideologue Israel Galili and his lieutenant Ya'acov Tzur, the dissenting voice of kibbutznik paratroopers back from the front have encouraged dovish Yitzhak Ben-Aharon to speak up.

The bid of the old Ahdut Avoda leadership to convert the UKM into a monolithic political body has aroused opposition among old Mapainiks in the Ihud Hakibbutzim wing, which has been without a recognized leader since Mussa Harish was killed in a road accident. MK Avraham Katz-Oz has proved too malleable in Galili's hands. New men are appearing in the Ihud who are regarded as candidates for leadership, especially Yehuda Shuster of Mifalim and Ran Cochan of Tzora.

Meanwhile, I have heard that it's not certain that Danny Rosolio will become secretary of Hevrat Ovdim, the Histadrut holding company, mainly because Histadrut Secretary-General Yeroham Meshel has someone else in mind, and partly because fellow kibbutz leader Ya'acov Tzur does not want Rosolio to become too powerful.

As Shlomo Argov's condition continues to improve, the Foreign Ministry is looking for a suitable successor at the London embassy. I am told that if Hanan Baron wants it, the job is his. Three other candidates have been mentioned: Eliashiv Ben-Horin, special ambassador for economic relations with Africa-Asia; Yohanan Meroz, special ambassador for relations with Europe; and Michael Elitzur, of the ministry's international department. I also hear that there is agitation among Shamir's fellow Herutniks to find a suitable party man. There has even been talk of appointing an outsider like Prof. Shlomo Avineri, a newly converted hawk who was the late Yigal Allon's director-general at the ministry.

AS OF October 1, far-reaching changes are to take place in Bank Leumi's executive pecking order. Ernest Japhet will remain very much the No. 1 man, as chairman of the board and chief executive officer. But instead of having five joint general managers under him, he will have Mordechai Einhorn as his No. 2. Einhorn, who is 52, will have the title of general manager and chief operations officer.

The next level of the executive structure will comprise seven division heads: Ya'acov Macht, 62, corporate; Baruch Yekutieli, 58, non-banking investments; Ya'acov Erel, 51, consumer and commercial banking; Dr. Yair Kadishai, 57, international; Haim Buxbaum, 52, accounting; David Kochav, 53, strategic planning; and Dr. Zalman Segal who at 44 has made the biggest jump, from bank spokesman to head of the Administrative Division.

EDITOR Deborah Lewin of At has quite a scoop in the August edition of her magazine, which appeared this week and carries a detailed, illustrated report on PLO atrocities in Lebanon. The report was first published in French in 1978 by the "Lebanese Information Centre" in Beirut, and most of the copies were destroyed by the PLO. She got the story after a copy fell into the hands of an Israeli soldier. There is a list of PLO crimes, plus the story of the rape by PLO terrorists of women employed as secretaries in Western embassies in Beirut.

A spokesman of the Lebanese forces, identified as Jackie, told At that the embassies suppressed the stories, threatening the rape victims with dismissal if they complained. One victim was a Canadian girl working for Canadian Ambassador Theodore Arcand, who has lately waged an anti-Israeli campaign via the Canadian media.

THE MOST zealous of the prime minister's hassidim. Deputy Minister Dov Shilansky, mid-week wrote to Yehuda Shuster director Dr. Yitzhak Arad to demand the dismissal from his staff of noted historian Yisrael Guttman. The latter was one of the academics who had "dared to criticize the government" following the recent heavy bombardment of Beirut. In a separate letter to Hebrew University History Professor Shmuel Etinger, Shilansky said: "Instead of telling the prime minister to stop invoking the Holocaust for political purposes, you should be ashamed of criticizing the leader of the Jewish people."

DISINFORMATION. Last week we were informed about a conversation in Russian at a diplomatic do between the outgoing U.S. deputy chief of mission Bill Brown and visiting Rumanian diplomat Vasile Paungu. Now we're better informed — the conversation was actually between Brown and the Foreign Ministry's veteran diplomat Yosef Guvrin. Turns out the two were reminiscing about the days when both of them served their respective missions in Moscow at the same time.

the Friday Dry Bones

Alternatives of war

The Washington Post, did not publish even one line about our capturing the gang of murderers that crossed the Jordan in order to commandeer a bus and murder its passengers.

True, such actions were not a threat to the existence of the state. But they did threaten the lives of civilians whose number we cannot estimate, day after day, week after week, month after month.

During the past nine weeks, we have, in effect, destroyed the combat potential of 20,000 terrorists. We hold 9,000 in a prison camp. Between 2,000 and 3,000 were killed and between 7,000 and 9,000 have been captured and cut off in Beirut. They have decided to leave there only because they have no possibility of remaining there. The problem will be solved.

WE CAN ALREADY look beyond the fighting. It will soon be over, we hope, and then I believe, indeed I know, we will have a long period of peace. There is no other country around us that is capable of attacking us.

We have destroyed the best tanks and planes the Syrians had. We have destroyed 24 of their ground-to-air missile batteries. After everything that happened, Syria did not go to war against us, not in Lebanon and not in the Golan Heights.

Jordan cannot attack us. We have learned that Jordan is sending telegrams to the Americans, warning that Israel is about to invade across the Jordan and capture Amman.

For our part, we will not initiate any attack against any Arab country. We have proved that we do not want wars. We made many painful sacrifices for a peace treaty with Egypt. That treaty stood the test of the fighting in Lebanon; in other words, it stood the test.

The demilitarized zone of 150 kilometres in Sinai exists, and no Egyptian soldier has been placed there. From the experience of the 1930s, I have to say that if ever the other side violated the agreement about the demilitarized zone, Israel would be obliged to introduce, without delay, a force stronger than that violating the international commitment: not in order to wage war, but to achieve one of two results:

restoration of the previous situation, i.e., resumed demilitarization, and the removal of both armies from the demilitarized zone; or attainment of strategic depth, in case the other side has taken the first step towards a war of aggression, as happened in Europe only three years after the abrogation of the demilitarized zone in the Rhineland.

Because the other Arab countries are completely incapable of attacking the State of Israel, there is reason to expect that we are facing a historic period of peace. It is obviously impossible to set a date.

It may well be that "The land shall be still for 40 years." Perhaps less, perhaps more. But from the facts before us, it is clear that, with the end of the fighting in Lebanon, we have ahead of us many years of establishing peace treaties and peaceful relations with the various Arab countries.

The conclusion — both on the basis of the relations between states and on the basis of our national experience — is that there is no divine mandate to go to war only if there is no alternative. There is no moral imperative that a nation must, or is entitled to, fight only when its back is to the sea, or to the abyss. Such a war may avert tragedy, if not a Holocaust, for any nation; but it causes it terrible loss of life.

Quite the opposite. A free, sovereign nation, which hates war and loves peace, and which is concerned about its security, must create the conditions under which war, if there is a need for it, will not be for lack of alternative. The conditions must be such — and their creation depends upon man's reason and his actions — that the price of victory will be few casualties, not many.

Music Director: MENDI RODAN

1982/3 CONCERT SEASON Special Offer to Jerusalemites

Everyone who buys a subscription by September 10 will benefit from a special price:

IS1000 (instead of IS 1,200)

Payable in 4 instalments (4 x IS 250)

Holders of subscription tickets will also enjoy "box office discounts" for performances at the Jerusalem Theatre, and be able to buy reduced price tickets for all YMCA weekly concerts.

There are 8 concerts in the subscription series at which world famous soloists will play, for example, Jean-Pierre Rampal (flute), Felicity Palmer (soprano), Claude Frank (piano), Maurice Bourge (oboe), and front rank Israeli musicians will appear like:

Mendi Rodan (conductor), Uzy Wiesel (cello), Uri Pianka (violin), Lydia Mordekovich (violin).

Press comment on the Israel Sinfonietta
Natan Mishiari, Ha'aretz: "In addition to the technical mastery and almost complete cleanliness of tone, there was a fine, warm, sensitive orchestral sound..."
Hanoach Ron, Davar: "The orchestra showed itself to be a mature, consolidated musical body..."

Subscriptions are available at:
Klaim, 8 Rehov Shamel, Tel. 240896; Cahana, 1 Rehov Dorot Rishonim, Tel. 248187.

Speaking up for Israel

By LEA LEVAVI/Jerusalem Post Reporter

"TELL ME, what's going on in your country?" Etya Simha and Chana Elroy, two Wizo lawyers who recently attended a convention in Helsinki of the International Alliance of Women, spent a lot of their time answering that question.

"I told the Greek delegate, who is also a lawyer, that she only hears one side of the case in her country and that she should be willing to listen to the other side," Elroy said. "I asked one of the women from France why it is that Israel takes in any Jew who needs asylum, while none of the Arab countries is willing to take in members of the PLO. She said she'd never realized that."

Wizo is the only organization from Israel represented in the Alliance, a non-governmental organization with observer status at the UN. It was at the World Conference of the UN Decade for Women in Copenhagen in 1979 that Elroy realized the importance of Wizo's being involved in the organization. "The representatives the government sent there had a hard time making contacts," she said, "but we already had them through the Alliance. Though the Alliance itself is non-political, there might have been an anti-Israel decision of some sort this time if Etya and I hadn't been there. Etya arrived a few days before I did and found the atmosphere chilly; the Finnish women didn't want Israel to participate because of the war.

"The hostility had to be concealed though, because Etya is on the board and I'm on certain committees. In fact at this convention the Bangladesh delegate nominated me to the constitution committee and I was elected.

WIZO HAS BEEN in the Alliance since 1954.

"Wizo Finland wanted to join but Union, the Finnish organization already in the Alliance, objected. The Alliance constitution says that if a country is already represented by one organization that organization must approve before another from the same country is admitted, and no reason needs to be given for refusing consent. When we pressed Union for a reason, because someone whispered that they didn't want 'Zionist propaganda,' they finally conceded that Wizo is an international organization and that Wizo Israel could represent it internationally."

THE TOPIC of the Helsinki convention was employment patterns in the 1980s. Delegates from developing countries expressed fears that modern technology would hurt women, who aren't trained for technological jobs. Their colleagues from the developed countries replied that the answer is to train the women not to fight progress.

Pensions, and ultimately pay, for housewives was another issue discussed, as was flexible and shorter working hours for both men and women.

Sweden's health minister, Karen Ahlrand, spoke about excuses men use in turning women down for political jobs. "They'll say one woman is too young, another too old, another too shy and another too brazen. When they run out of other excuses, they say we women don't have a sense of humor." Elroy invited Minister Ahlrand to visit Israel, but she replied that this wasn't the right time.

"She did buy a ceramic plate which said 'From Israel with love,' and I gave her a hamsa and told her that if she wore the good luck charm she might become prime minister." (Wizo donated $150-worth of Israeli souvenirs to the Alliance for sale at the convention).

"I'LL GIVE YOU another example of why our participation in conventions like this is so important from the informational point of view," said Elroy. "The job of taking minutes at a particular meeting was shared between a woman from Lesoto and myself. Afterwards we read each other's notes. She had written that Etya and I were from Egypt and in another place, when she should have written Pakistan, she wrote Palestine. It's important for us to be around to catch things like that and to correct all sorts of misinformation in the process."

The Egyptians, incidentally, asked no questions about Lebanon; they were too busy having a power fight among themselves for a job on the board of the Alliance. The only other Arab country listed among the 30 participating nations was Sudan but Elroy said that to her knowledge, no Sudanese ever arrived.

"Though there are many Asian and African nations in the organization, and no colour or other barriers, the leadership jobs are primarily in Western hands and those women want to keep the tone of the organization Western," Elroy said. "For that reason, they're interested in keeping Israel actively involved and we have to help them to help us by being there, pulling our weight and keeping our voices heard."

Friend from Lebanon

By ILAN BRUNNER/Special to the Jerusalem Post

"IF THE Syrians were occupying Israel, would you let your 14-year-old daughter go off with a Syrian officer to Damascus to visit his wife and daughter?"

It was a difficult question for me to answer. My fellow officer was referring to my friendship with Colette, a 14-year-old girl from the village of Kleia in Southern Lebanon. Colette had just returned from a visit with my wife and my 14-year-old daughter Sharon at our home in Givatayim.

I first met Colette while I was a press liaison officer with the IDF. When escorting journalists around Lebanon I used to stop in the Southern Lebanese villages and point out the Beaufort castle. On these stops we were often invited to visit the homes of the villagers where hospitality would be offered in the form of coffee and fruit.

This sort of stop allows personal contact and a journalist can get first hand impressions and interview the people who live there.

On one of these visits to a private home, I met a young girl, daughter of my hosts. Her name was Colette, and I invited her to sit next to me. She was a pretty girl of 14, with nice features and dark inquisitive eyes.

Since she had been studying French, we were able to converse. Visits to her home became an almost daily affair and Colette and I became friends.

One evening, while sitting with her family, an idea occurred to me and I asked Colette whether she would like to visit my home in Israel and meet my daughter. Without hesitation she said that she would. When I approached her parents with the same question their response was one that I shall never forget. Her father said, "Colette is like your own daughter and you treat her as such: If you want to invite her to visit with your family she has our blessing."

I applied for the necessary permits and prepared my wife and daughter for the visit. The next time I had leave, I went to the village and picked up Colette. Her parents loaded us with presents of homemade pita, goat cheese, fruit and vegetables.

AS WE drove South to Givatayim, I pointed out sites of general interest, the Sea of Galilee, Nazareth and other places. I was impressed by the courage of my young guest. She had left her home and family, and ventured into an unknown Israel, not knowing where she was going or whom she would meet and not even being able to speak the language of the land. She had placed her trust in a near stranger. This was indicative of the strength of our mutual affection and it was with a sense of great responsibility that I drove southwards.

At home, my daughter Sharon took over. Although the language barrier was a problem, the two girls overcame this through mutual interest. Colette was shown her bedroom where she would be sleeping with Sharon. Toys, music and cosmetics have a way with young ladies and one doesn't need many words to convey ideas. From there on it was clear sailing.

We took Colette for a drive around Tel Aviv, a visit to the Shalom Tower and the Marina at Atarim Square. The next day we went to the Safari park, highlight of the visit. Colette constantly spoke of the animals she had seen and was happy that the cages were labelled in Arabic.

My own Arabic improved due to this visit and I can already name quite a few of the animals in Arabic. Sharon introduced Colette to her friends and they went out together to meet boys and girls of their own age. My wife had prepared a real feast in honour of our guest but Colette is not a great eater and was not used to the Western food we eat. Pita, hummus and ice cream were sure hits, however.

Colette was fascinated by our TV game. I wonder how she explains this modern wonder to her brothers and sisters back home and whether there are words to convey all the experiences she had during her visit with us.

The next day I brought a tired but happy Colette home to her parents. I haven't seen much of Colette lately, my term in the reserves being finished. I did have a one day call up since then, and I stopped to see her and her parents. The reunion was warm and we had missed one another.

Not many Israelis are happy to get another call up, once released, but I am... I have a friend in Lebanon.

KIRYAT YITZHAK ELCHANAN IS BEING BUILT AND BOUGHT BY JERUSALEM'S BEST

Excellent Quality Apartments Available at Excellent Prices

Kiryat Yitzhak Elchanan (KYE) in Har Nof (Givat Shaul Bet) is being built exclusively by Hillel Pfefferman (builder of Jerusalem Plaza) and Lustigman & Lerner (builders of Hechal Shlomo).

KYE combines highest quality housing, suburban living and reasonable prices — all only 10 minutes from the center of Jerusalem. Har Nof, a beautiful new residential area of Jerusalem surrounded by the personally green Judean Hills, is being developed as a new religious community with all the necessary facilities — synagogues, yeshivot, schools, shopping centers, play areas and gardens.

YOUR NEIGHBORS WILL BE FINE ORTHODOX FAMILIES. Each of Kiryat Yitzhak Elchanan's 2-3 room apartments features:

- Construction according to American standards
- Layout and design to accommodate American appliances
- Highest quality insulation • Individual heating control
- Terraces facing the Judean Hills • Sunbath balconies
- Two complete bathrooms • Solar water heating
- Shabbat elevator • Free storage room • Intercom
- Free interior design plan
- Prices based upon purchase regardless of any rise in the building index
- Prices are considerably lower at the moment than any apartment of comparable quality on the Jerusalem market and are bank insured.

Contact William Korkes, the developer at (02) 235-171 Ext. 1450 or (03) 754-698 for detailed plans and a visit to the site, or write P.O.B. 30, Savyon, Israel.

We Icelandic Friends of Israel

are profoundly concerned with the deadly war conducted by Israel in Lebanon. We are witnessing a continuous erosion of public sympathy for Israel in Iceland and the world at large. We view with great apprehension the consolidation of hatred and distrust among Arabs towards Israel as a result of Israel's refusal to recognize the Palestinians' national rights.

We call on Israel's leaders to heed the plea of Israel's friends in the world by stopping the war in Lebanon and to propose to the Palestinian nation and its recognized leaders a negotiated solution, based on reciprocal recognition of both peoples' national rights.

TEL AVIV. — The shekel proved yesterday that it is not such a bad currency after all. For the second consecutive session the shekel was revealed, this time by a margin of 14 agorot. Over the past two trading sessions, the shekel has appreciated by more than one per cent vis-a-vis the American dollar.

Few investors could have cause to complain about developments on the share market. No fewer than 78 issues advanced by margins of five per cent or better. Only 20 issues fell by similar amounts. More than a handful of securities soared by as much as 15 per cent.

The management of TETA announced that due to the vast over-subscription investors will be receiving only four per cent of the amount offered.

Trading turnovers declined to under the IS490 million level. It appeared as if the Bank of

Tel Aviv Stock Exchange

Israel was tiring of its supportive habits as index-linked bonds fell by fairly substantial margins, in some cases up to 2 per cent.

The commercial bank shares continued to advance. In the morning session Danot 5.0 scored a 10 per cent gain while the 1.0 shares were 7.9 per cent higher when the shares were traded in the afternoon. FIBI took a 5.6 per cent loss.

Among insurance issues Aryeh traded without rights and gained 30 points in the "continuous trading" session. Phoenix 0.5 was a 10 per cent winner.

Magor 0.1 was a 15 per cent winner in the services sector. Rapac 0.1 was up by 10 per cent.

Land development and real estate issues came through with a winning session.

There was plenty of volatile upside action among industrials. Gal Industries 1.0 shares were up by 15 per cent. Haifa Chemicals were 10 per cent higher. They were joined by Umar 5.0, Tempo-Beer 1.0, and King 5.0. Lachish Industries were 15 per cent higher.

Jordan Exploration, with a 10 per cent drop, was a surprise loser in an otherwise rising investment company group.

The end in sight

AT LONG LAST it may truly be said that the end is in sight. Yesterday the government approved the final, amended draft of the agreement for the evacuation of the PLO from West Beirut. The Lebanese government, for its part, officially requested the U.S., France and Italy to supply army contingents to the multinational force that is due to oversee the evacuation.

The PLO exodus is scheduled to start tomorrow afternoon — provided that no last-minute hitches of any kind spoil the well-laid plans on which U.S. envoy Philip Habib has laboured so persistently in the face of what seemed, on occasion, as impossible odds. One condition inserted by Israel only yesterday for the start of the exodus was the return by the terrorists of an Israeli soldier they had kidnapped the night before. That was a stupid and vicious act, typical of the PLO.

Within a fortnight at most of the start of the exodus the PLO will, under the agreement, have cleared out of West Beirut, leaving the Lebanese to settle their own affairs without terrorist interference — the sort of interference that has contributed to the delay in the Lebanese parliament's election of a new president, which was due to have taken place yesterday.

Whether all PLO terrorists will by then have actually left for more distant Arab lands is still moot. There appears to be substance to reports that several hundred terrorists, holding Lebanese papers, have already assimilated into the local scene, and are preparing to stay on as the skeletal remains of the PLO. They may be hard to identify, and flush out. Then, too, the agreement applies only to West Beirut and not to the rest of Lebanon, notably the Bekaa and Tripoli, which contain their share of PLO personnel.

The ouster of these remaining terrorists must clearly belong to the second stage of Israel's campaign in Lebanon, which presumably will be carried out by political and not military means. Israel's larger aims, which include the ouster of all foreign forces from Lebanon, and the installation of a stable and strong central Lebanese government, will take some time, at best.

It will nevertheless be argued that the ten-week siege of West Beirut, however perturbing some of its aspects, was an entirely justifiable first stage in the implementation of the Israeli programme.

There was, it will be argued, no other way to have the PLO removed from the city it had turned into a surrogate capital of "the Palestinian revolution." Diplomatic pressure unaccompanied by the threat of falling bombs, even if dropped without pinpoint accuracy, would have been wholly unavailing.

The thesis will doubtless be argued back and forth for some time. But it plainly was not the government's original intention that Israel's troops would linger for ten full weeks at West Beirut's gates after reaching them at the end of the first week of Operation Peace for Galilee, to see the PLO exit. The original plans did not call for what ensued: the carnage, highlighted by the phosphorus bombs, the resulting blot on Israel's escutcheon, the plummeting of Israel's prestige as a fair warrior, the near collision with the U.S., the loss of government control over the conduct of the war, the crisis in the national consensus.

Premier Begin may, of course, dismiss all these as matters of little or no consequence. He has already satisfied himself that the killing of so many innocent civilians in the war was excused by the high purpose of smashing the PLO's Hitlerite conspiracy. He is convinced that the hard knocks Israel has been receiving in the media abroad are due simply to the operation of resurgent anti-Semitism. And he apparently believes he can handle Defence Minister Sharon's attempts to monopolize military authority.

As for the national consensus, Mr. Begin is losing no sleep over it. The fact is that the majority of the people approves of his, and the government's running of the war, and if elections were held today the Likud, according to the polls, would win an absolute majority. This may be due in large measure to Mr. Begin's consummate skills as a political pitchman. But in politics it is the decisive fact.

What remains to be seen, however, is the lasting effect of the PLO's military defeat. It is too early to predict that it has dealt Palestinian terrorism a mortal blow. It is even more premature to assume that it has served as suitable prelude for the imposition of an Israel-style Palestinian solution.

A CLASSIC war of no alternative was the Second World War waged by the Allies. On August 23, 1939, Great Britain stood helpless. Although she still had an empire embracing an area of 40 million square kilometres, on which the sun never set, her prestige had sunk deep in the seven seas over which it still ruled, though no longer exclusively.

Britain and France disavowed the assurances given to Czechoslovakia and together forced that small and courageous nation to bend its knee before Hitler.

On August 23, 1939, the German Ribbentrop and the Soviet Molotov signed a treaty. Behind them stood the bloody tyrant named Joseph Vissarionovich Stalin.

And so war broke out on September 1, 1939, when the Nazi German army crossed the Polish-German border.

Poland fought because she had no alternative. Within three days the Polish army was crushed and the Polish state ceased to exist.

IN THOSE days the Bolshevik propagandists told everyone who would listen that there was a supreme genius sitting in the Kremlin, but in international relations, he understood nothing. On June 22, 1941, the German army attacked the Soviet army.

This was, then, a war of no alternative for Poland, a war without option for France and a war without choice for Russia.

What price did humanity pay for this war of no alternative? Between 30 and 40 million killed, three times this number wounded, among them six million Jews — the only people against whom the Nazi Germans used gas. (Hitler had a very large stock of gas, but he did not use it against other peoples, for fear of the reaction.)

This is the terrible consequence of a war of no alternative. All mankind was placed on the edge of the abyss, when Nazi Germany was not far from total victory. In 1944, Germany was close to developing the atom bomb.

WAS IT POSSIBLE to prevent the Second World War?

Today, thanks to research and the facts known to us, there is no longer any doubt about the answer: Yes, indeed, it was possible to prevent it.

On March 7, 1936, Hitler announced that he was abrogating the Treaty of Versailles. In order to implement his decision, he introduced two battalions of the German army into the demilitarized Rhineland. At that time, two French divisions would have sufficed to capture all the German soldiers who entered the Rhineland. As a result of that, Hitler would have fallen.

His prestige would have crumbled. At that time he did not yet have an army worthy of the name, only gangs of SS, SA and

Alternatives of war

The Prime Minister, using the example of Operation Peace for Galilee, compares the merits of going to war by choice or by default.

By MENACHEM BEGIN

We carried on our lives then by a miracle, with a clear recognition of life's imperative: to win, to establish a state, a government, a parliament, a democracy, an army — a force to defend Israel and the entire Jewish people.

THE SECOND war of no alternative was the Yom Kippur War and the War of Attrition that preceded it. What was the situation on that Yom Kippur day (October 6, 1973)? We had 177 tanks deployed on the Golan Heights against 1,400 Soviet-Syrian tanks; and fewer than 500 of our soldiers manned positions along the Suez Canal against five divisions sent to the front by the Egyptians.

Is it any wonder that the first days of that war were hard to bear? I remember Aluf Avraham Yaffe came to us, to the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defence Committee, and said: "Oy, it's so hard! Our boys, 18- and 19-year-olds, are falling like flies and are defending our nation with their very bodies."

In the Golan Heights there was a moment when the O/C Northern Command — today our chief of staff — heard his deputy say, "This is it." What that meant was: "We've lost; we have to come down off the Golan Heights. And the then O/C said, 'Give me another five minutes.'"

Sometimes five minutes can decide a nation's fate. During those five minutes, several dozen tanks arrived, which changed the entire situation on the Golan Heights.

If this had not happened, if the Syrian enemy had come down from the heights to the valley, he would have reached Haifa — for there was not a single tank to obstruct his armoured column's route to Haifa. Yes, we would have fought with knives — as one of our esteemed wives has said — with knives against tanks. Many more would have fallen, and in every settlement there would have been the kind of slaughter at which the Syrians are experts.

LET US TURN from the international example to ourselves. Operation Peace for Galilee is not a military operation resulting from the lack of an alternative. The terrorists did not threaten the existence of the State of Israel; they "only" threatened the lives of Israel's citizens and members of the Jewish people. There are those who find fault with the second part of that sentence. If there was no danger to the existence of the state, why did you go to war?

I will explain why. We had three wars which we fought without an alternative. The first was the War of Independence, which began on November 30, 1947, and lasted until January 1949. It is worthwhile remembering these dates, because there are also those who try to deceive concerning the nine weeks which have already passed since the beginning of Operation Peace for Galilee. This was a war without alternative, after the Arab armies invaded Eretz Yisrael. If not for our ability, none of us would have remained alive.

What happened in that war, which we went off to fight with no alternative?

Six thousand of our fighters were killed. We were then 650,000 Jews in Eretz Yisrael, and the number of fallen amounted to about 1 per cent

WOLFSON'S FOLLY

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, — Has Sir Isaac Wolfson built Israel's first folly? A folly, I should explain, is something eccentric English build which is not functional, but decorative.

I say this because my wife and I travelled to Jerusalem to view and pray in this new and supposedly beautiful place of worship. We and about 150 people milled in the square outside the closed doors, to be told it was only open from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. When I enquired what time Minkha and Maariv were said, I was curtly told by one of the officials: "No davening here — prayers next door."

This strengthens my view that we English have introduced a new, but outmoded idea into Israeli culture: we don't need it, we can't afford it, but let's have it.

EDUCATION in 1948

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, — Mr. Leighton Pratt's letter (August 1) contains a series of unfounded slurs on the higher education system in Israel. His preposterous claim that "the educational infrastructure for a future state of Palestine is far and away better established, and recognised internationally, than what Israel had to offer when it declared independence" is completely unfounded.

The Hebrew University was established in 1925 and, long before the establishment of the State of Israel in 1948, was recognised internationally as a leading institution of higher education and research with many scholars who were acknowledged leaders in their fields. It was certainly the best university-level institution in the entire Middle East with exacting standards of admission. Furthermore, we wonder if Mr. Pratt is at all aware of the Technion in Haifa and the Weizmann Institute in Rehovot. All these institutions were, and are, without peer in the entire region and can easily hold their own against similar seats of learning and research in the world.

We sincerely doubt if any of the Islamic and other so-called universities in Judea and Samaria can match any of the above criteria. Bir Zeit, for example, was simply a high school and normal school run by the Quakers until the period of great expansion of educational facilities in Judea and Samaria under the aegis of Israel. Certainly, the Jordanian authorities never allowed growth or development.

We surely bear no ill will to the institutions mentioned by Mr. Pratt, but as for his own bailiwick, Bir Zeit, there are very few scholars of international repute there. Indeed, the criteria for the acceptance of both faculty and students seem very loose. The major impetus for the development of these institutions is not the search for truth or the achievement of high standards of research and education, but the gross availability of Arab oil money. As for the excellent primary and secondary schools, anyone who has contact with the products of these Arab schools knows that their students have been taught rudimentary facts by rote and have not been encouraged to develop real learning skills.

Finally, we wonder if Mr. Pratt and his ilk at Bir Zeit, as resident aliens, would permit themselves the dissemination of such arrogant and malicious distortions in any other country.

SHOCKING HEADLINE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, — I was absolutely stunned by your headline over one of the front page articles of July 25 referring to "2000 PLO fighters."

Do you now classify these perpetrators of inhuman acts of destruction against civilian targets in Israel — and, as is now being revealed, acts of torture against the civilian population in Lebanon — as "fighters" and not as heretofore, as "terrorists"? Or is this just another case of your headline writers not matching their titles to the contents of the articles?

BENJAMIN KLOTZ

about to attack us. We must be honest with ourselves. We decided to attack them.

This was a war of self-defence in the noblest sense of the term. The government of national unity then established decided unanimously: We will take the initiative and attack the enemy, drive him back, and thus assure the security of Israel and the future of the nation.

We did not do this for lack of an alternative. We could have gone on waiting. We could have sent the army home. Who knows if there would have been an attack against us? There is no proof of it. There are several arguments to the contrary. While it is indeed true that the closing of the Straits of Tiran was an act of aggression, a causa belli, there is always room for a great deal of consideration as to whether it is necessary to make a causa into a bellum.

And so there were three wars with no alternative — the War of Independence, the War of Attrition and the Yom Kippur War — and it is our misfortune that our wars have been so. If in the two other wars, the wars of choice — the Sinai Campaign and the Six Day War — we had losses like those in the no-alternative wars, we would have been left today with few of our best youth, without the strength to withstand the Arab world.

AS FOR Operation Peace for Galilee, it does not really belong to the category of wars of no alternative. We could have gone on seeing our civilians injured in Metulla or Kiryat Shmona or Nahariya. We could have gone on counting those killed by explosive charges left in a Jerusalem supermarket, or a Petah Tikva bus stop.

All the orders to carry out these acts of murder and sabotage came from Beirut. Should we have reconciled ourselves to the ceaseless killing of civilians, even after the agreement ending hostilities reached last summer, which the terrorists interpreted as an agreement permitting them to strike at us from every side, besides Southern Lebanon? They tried to infiltrate gangs of murderers via Syria and Jordan, and by a miracle we captured them. We might also not have captured them. There was a gang of four terrorists which infiltrated from Jordan, whose members admitted they had been about to commandeer a bus (and we remember the bus on the coastal road).

And in the Diaspora? Even Philip Habib interpreted the agreement ending acts of hostility as giving them freedom to attack targets beyond Israel's borders. We have never accepted this interpretation. Shall we permit Jewish blood to be spilled in the Diaspora? Shall we permit bombs to be planted against Jews in Paris, Rome, Athens or London? Shall we permit our ambassadors to be attacked?

There are slanderers who say that a full year of quiet has passed between us and the terrorists. Nonsense. There was not even one month of quiet. The newspapers and communications media, including The New York Times and (Continued on page 7.)
